Welcome

Welcome to issue 44 of OLM.

Yet another bumper packed edition for you to peruse over the up coming days and weeks.

Our stand out articles in this issue are highlighted at the top of the contents page and I am grateful to our suppliers of those pieces. Brian Allan, Philip Kinsella and especially MUFON's Robert 'Bob' Spearing.

Bobs article is an in-depth review of past US Naval cases from the Pacific Ocean and beyond...

See you next time...

Warmest regards

BIG CAT WATCH

We begin this issue of OLM's regular Big Cat Watch with the story of a sighting of a big cat prowling around the Britannia Bridge area of Anglesey in North Wales. Tristan Cork of the Bristol Posts tells us why he believes the elusive and shy creatures are real and out there hiding in the British countryside. Does an image prove the existence of big cat activity at a Cotswold beauty spot?

'Massive big cat' spotted lurking near Britannia Bridge, couple claim.

"A possible big cat sighting has been reported near the Britannia Bridge on Anglesey. A couple, driving back from a cinema night in Llandudno claim to have seen the "massive" feline on the embankment near the bridge late on March 8.

The woman called Gemma told the Puma Watch site: "We were driving back from Llandudno cinema and spotted this black cat at 11:15pm while just coming into Anglesey off the Britannia Bridge, our headlights lit it up. We clearly saw and locked eyes with it for a few seconds and then it disappeared into the deep foliage of the embankment. It all happened so fast and unexpected."

Although she couldn't get a picture of the animal in time, she hoped that a traffic camera or another driver might have captured it. She estimated that the cat was bigger than her Labrador, who passed away a few months ago, and that its tail was longer than her height.

"I couldn't get a pic at the time, it had gone. I was hoping a traffic cam may have picked it up or another driver may have even seen it. It was massive, we lost our Labrador a few months ago and he was a BIG boy, this cat was bigger than him, with a massive bushy tail that was longer than me and I'm only 4'10 lol."

This is not the first time that a big cat has been reportedly sighted on Anglesey. In September 2020, Puma Watch received a report from a resident who claimed that their Rottweiler was scared by a big cat on several occasions.

Other sightings on Anglesey, have included a bus passenger spotting a big cat near Moelfre and an encounter near Cemlyn.

Puma Watch say "big cats may have been released into the wild by their owners after the Dangerous Wild Animals Act of 1976 made it illegal to keep them as pets without a licence. Experts say that these animals are elusive and shy, and that sightings are rare even in their native habitats.

"The Welsh Government has not launched an official investigation into big cat sightings, despite calls from some politicians and campaigners."

The following was reported later in Marxh:

'Big cats live among us and I don't care if you don't believe it'

For me, it's a simple fact. I know they exist.

Tristan Cork, Senior Reporter penned the following for release on the Bristol post website:

"Britain has got a new Environment Secretary, Therese Coffey, who told farmers the other day that she wasn't particularly enamoured with the long-standing idea of reintroducing lynx to the wilder bits of the countryside of Scotland, England and Wales.

The big cats were once native to these isles but since they and wolves were hunted to extinction in medieval times, officially, Britain has no true apex predator - foxes, otters, owls and eagles. No wonder the deer population is reportedly the highest it's been since Henry VIII's reign.

But Therese Coffey's doubts and the farmers' objections make me smile. Because I know the countryside of Britain does already contain an apex predator - the puma.

Yes, the puma. Some call them panthers, some cougars, but it's basically the same thing - the smallest of the big cat family that includes lions and tigers, and yes, they live among us in the countryside around Bristol, in Wiltshire, Somerset, Gloucestershire, the Forest of Dean, Devon, the mountains of Wales, Cornwall and rural Dorset.

Most people simply refuse to believe this. They say it's not possible, they may mock people who come forward and say they've seen one. They pour scorn on the blurry photos of a black cat-shaped blob in a field, taken hurriedly on a phone from 200 yards away.

I'm not here to convince you they exist. I don't even care what others think. This isn't even a case of me saying I believe they exist. I don't 'believe' it, like it's an article of faith. For me, it's a simple fact. I know they exist. I've seen one. I've spoken to so many people who have also seen one and many more who've seen the kind of evidence that could only be as a result of the presence of a large cat living in the countryside of the West Country, that it's no longer a matter of conjecture. For me it's not even up for debate. You can say 'I don't believe you' if you like and that's fine. You can start arguing why there aren't or can't be big cats living in the countryside of the West Country if you like, but I'll just shrug and let you continue.

For 15 years I was a reporter for the Bristol Post's sister paper, the Western Daily Press, and was given the rather grand but ultimately meaningless title of 'countryside correspondent'. That basically meant I reported on foxhunting and rural issues, and over the years, many, many reports of sightings of big cats.

There has also been official acknowledgement that this is a real thing. Just after the turn of the Millennium, the Forestry Commission reported one of its staff was surveying wild boar numbers with night vision equipment and watched a large cat watch the boar's herd. Several times, I spoke to or heard about pilots who fly various air ambulances and police helicopters who spotted and tracked large cats moving around the fields at night.

Some of the more memorable reports I investigated included a chicken farmer who came face to face with a panther that had got into his long shed by digging underneath the end wall. I inspected the scene down in Somerset and it will stay with me forever. The shed had a door at one end, and a row of around six large chicken coups raised off the ground with floorboards and a corridor running along the left hand side. At the far end, where the seventh coup would be was a store area. Underneath this, an animal had got in by scraping away beneath the wooden wall at the end, but then found itself unable to get into the actual coups. The farmer reckoned it had spent a night underneath his poor chickens. The claw marks on the wooden boards were around twice the size of a fox's paw.

When he walked in through the door in the morning, he froze as the cat froze too, underneath the boards by his right ankle at the end of the corridor. He backed away slowly as the cat, thinking it was cornered, searched for a way out. The farmer was still in shock when I spoke to him.

Most of the stories I heard were from people who just told me and said they didn't want a report in the paper, they just wanted to share it with someone who wouldn't laugh at them. There was the good friend of mine, a sober and straight churchwarden, who told me quietly one Sunday that the previous morning he'd been up walking his dog, which raced towards a thicket in a field half a mile from town and came racing back. He looked in awe as a large dark panther emerged from the other side of the thicket around 15 yards from him and strolled off along the hedge line in front of him.

What do panthers live off, I can hear you sceptics cry?

Well, there has apparently never been so many deer in Britain as there is now. Farming has changed radically in the last 20 years or so - the West Country's staple of dairy farming is getting harder and harder, and often only possible in mega-sheds. Sheep farming too, is tougher than ever. Fields are increasingly left for silage or left empty altogether, and in that gap, other wildlife, like rabbits, have thrived. Less human activity on land and more small mammals? It's easy to see what an apex predator could eat.

I remember talking to those involved in one particularly harrowing case. A farmer in north Wiltshire found one morning that one of his cows had clearly given birth overnight, but the calf was nowhere to be found in the field.

He followed a trail of blood across the field, through a hedge and found what looked to have been a stillborn calf on a branch halfway up a tree. The farmer hadn't believed that big cats were possible in Britain until that moment.

Nearby, around the same time, workers at a livery yard found many of the horses distressed one morning, huddled by the gate of the paddock. Across the way, the circular menage training area had clear, huge cat pawprints right across the sand. No-one there refused to 'believe' any more.

These animals are, by their very nature, incredibly shy and wary of humans. They are almost totally nocturnal, they almost always are smart enough to avoid car headlights on a road, and while some drivers report seeing a panther flash across the road in the limit of their headlights on a country road, no-one will ever know how many times a panther has crossed a lane behind a passing car.

If you happen to come near one, it will almost certainly have seen, smelled or heard you coming long before you get there, and will have taken off to hide or avoid you. My friend who had the close encounter said if his dog hadn't been off the lead, they would have walked straight past the large thicket where it had probably been sleeping, without knowing it was there.

Like many people who've seen them, my own sighting was dim and frustrating. Another friend who'd been reporting seeing a large animal disturbing a herd of cows in a field across the river from his house called to tell me it was there again, so I rushed down and out we went.

Dusk was falling as we moved through the herd, and the dark shape in the distance always stayed just too far enough ahead for us to get a good look. It was the size of a dog, but longer, and moved slowly and carefully, not trotting or running like a dog. Across two or three fields we followed it until it got too dark to see.

Possible claw marks spotted ait Cotswold's beauty spot

Many who see them never tell a soul, for fear of ridicule. Others tell themselves they must be mistaken, or end up arguing with their mates down the pub, or family and friends, that their eyes must have deceived them.

Those looking at reports and sightings with a semi-scientific eye have concluded that the population is pretty small, but look at countries where pumas, panthers or cougars exist - they have huge territories, and can cover 30 miles in a night. My friend lived in the mountains of Colorado almost all her life, where mountain lions are known to live, and she's seen one only once, when it disappeared out of her headlights, in all her years of driving the country roads at night.

You can chose to dismiss this if you like. I've long gone past the point of thinking everyone needs to believe they exist in this country. Maybe one day someone will catch one somehow, or more likely, get good evidence on their dashcam or doorbell camera. Then again, a huge cat appeared on a petrol station CCTV one night a few years back and the footage formed the basis of many an online article, but still there are those who will scoff until they see one themselves for real, and that's fine. Facts don't care about your opinion, and no offence, but neither do I.

Big cat 'claw marks' in 'shredded trees' at Cotswolds beauty spot

'I am 5"7 and the scratches are higher than me so a pretty large cat must have stood tall to use the tree as a scratching post' Wrote reporter Phil Norris on the Gloucestershire Live website.

A woman thinks she may have found signs of a big cat at large in Gloucestershire. It comes as she describes the discovery of 'scratch marks' in trees in the Cotswolds in recent days.

The sighting of what looks like 'claw marks' comes 14 months after a woman said she fled to safety after spotting a 'big cat' at South Cerney lakes. In that case from January 2022, she found sanctuary in a nearby house.

Last week, a woman was close to South Cerney, near Lower Mill Estate, also at the Cotswold Water Park. Esther Chapman shared with Gloucestershire Live images of two trees that she said had been 'shredded with what looks like claw marks.

She said: "I am 5"7 and the scratches are higher than me so a pretty large cat must have stood tall to use the tree as a scratching post. I have a big Pointer dog and you can see the height of the scratched tree in comparison to the size of my dog. "At first I thought the scratches could have been caused by antlers from a Stag but the trees are bunched too tightly together and some of the scratches are short and deep which you would expect from claws."

Frank Tunbridge, 74, from Podsmead has been studying wildlife and big cats for around 60 years and is convinced they are roaming in the British countryside. Mr Tunbridge believes there are between 16 -24 sightings of big cats every week, throughout Great Britain, but believes many people keep it to themselves, for fear of ridicule.

Two 'big black cat' sightings reportedly made in the Wrexham area

Arron Evans reported online at The Leader website in early April, the following sighting

Reports submitted to 'Puma Watch' claim the encounters took place in Rossett and on Wrexham Industrial Estate. The first report was submitted by Mr O, who was driving on Cox Lane, Rossett at 2pm on March 3, 2023.

He said he saw a 'huge black cat' run across the road and into a hedge, leaving him 'shocked and amazed' by what he saw.

Mr O told Puma Watch: “Driving on Cox Lane and a huge black cat, massive bigger than most dogs but definitely a cat, ran across the road and into a hedge about 20/30 metres in front of me.”

The second report was also submitted in March by a man called Simon, who was working on a timber yard on the Wrexham Industrial Estate at 1.30am on January 10, 2023.

He said he saw a 'big black animal' standing between rows of timber, which seemed to be dazzled by the truck lights.

He said it ran away into the fields when he approached. He added that he thought it was a 'large German Shepherd-type dog' at first, but later realized it was a big cat, 'possibly a puma'.

Simon told Puma Watch: “I was driving a folk lift truck on a timber yard just past mid night surrounded by miles of fields when in-between rows of timber there was a big black animal standing there, it seemed to be dazzled by the truck lights then ran away into the fields.

"First thought was it must have been a large German Shepard type dog as I didn’t think such big cats would be in the area.”

These are far from the first reported sightings in the Wrexham area or indeed north Wales as a whole. According to Puma Watch, a witness was left with recurring ‘panic attacks’ after reportedly encountering a growling “big black cat with glowing eyes” while camping at Commonwood Fishery – just fields away from the most recent Rossett sighting.

In March 2021, a newspaper delivery person reportedly spotted a huge black creature “with a long tail and orange eyes” in the Hoseley area of Marford.

Puma Watch claims that these reports add to the 'growing evidence' of big cats living in North Wales. A statement on their website reads: "We’ve now documented hundreds of sightings across the region and believe that big cats were released into the wild in the 1970s when they were banned as pets, and have since established small but significant populations.

"Big cats such as pumas are solitary with a hunting range of dozens of miles. They’re mostly spotted in Snowdonia and the Clwydian hills but reports of sightings in urban locations some distance from these areas are becoming more frequent.

"As seen with Llandundo’s now-famous goats, who have taken to roaming the town’s deserted streets during the coronavirus lockdowns, it’s likely that the reduced levels of human activity during the pandemic encouraged big cats to roam further from the hills into more populated areas.

"Despite human activity returning to near pre-pandemic levels, it seems many big cats are now happy to stay in their new territory. "When big cats were banned as pets in the 1970s, it was legal to release them into the countryside to avoid expensive rehoming costs. Owners from across the UK travelled to areas like Wales to release their cats in the remote environment, where small but significant populations have thrived ever since.

Perhaps one of the most interesting sightings this time is the following from the UK’s West Country.

'Big cat' caught on camera in West Country after Storm Noa

Tom O'Shea says the cat's tail 'almost had a life of its own'

Senior reporter Lisa Letcher wrote on the news papers website on 19th April 2023.

“Video footage appears to show a big cat prowling around the outskirts of moorland in the West Country. Tourists from Frome on holiday in Cornwall captured the 'creature' on video. The clip, which is over a minute in length, shows the black cat casually walking around a field near St Neot’s, between Bodmin and Liskeard. The man who recorded the footage said he spotted a number of wild-looking 'normal' cats during his recent trip - but says this one was different, reports Cornwall Live.

He estimated the cat was at least double the size of an ordinary domestic cat and described it as fitting the description of the Beast of Bodmin Moor. He said its tail was so distinctive "it had a life of its own". Tom O'Shea used to live in Cornwall and having often heard of the legends of big cats roaming the moors, jumped at the chance to record the "unusual-looking feline". After consulting a friend he believes it could have been a jaguarundi wild cat - some of which are kept in captivity in Cornwall.

"I managed to get a video of it and have since shown it to someone who has a knowledge of animals," Dr O'Shea said. "He suspects that it is a jaguarundi based on the details in the video."

The 35-year-old said it would be "unusual" if it were but "not totally out of the realm of reason". "We were quite excited by this as this would certainly fit with past reports of the beast and we can attest to the creature we saw being roughly double the size of an average domestic cat with a much thicker and longer tail.

Jaguarundis are slightly larger than a domestic cat, weighing 8 - 16 pounds. Their coat is a solid colour; either rusty-brown or charcoal grey. Jaguarundi's move in a quick weasel-like manner. They eat birds, rabbits, and small rodents, hunting during early morning and evening. "That said, we did also see a number of rather wild-looking but definitely 'normal' cats wandering about the place during our stay.

"What was really kind of distinctive about it is that it was definitely much longer than your average domestic cat and had really bizarre markings on it," he continued. It was really unusual and after a few seconds of looking at it straight on, it moved in a really unusual way as well. It didn't move like a usual cat."

He said the "creature" emerged from a hedgerow during Storm Noa and appeared again the following day when he caught it on video. "Its tail almost had a life of its own,"

The footage, which is over a minute in length, shows the black cat casually walking around a field near St Neot's, between Bodmin and Liskeard. he added.

The small village of Chirk Green is situated on the Welsh side of the Welsh and English border. It is the latest area to declare a sighting of a Big Cat.

With the following titled article posted online by its author Ana Cazan, it appeared in the Border Counties Advertiser online edition on 10th April 2023.

"A member of the public says she spotted the big cat near Lady Margaret's Caravan Park, adjacent to Chirk Castle and the town's Kronospan factory on Tuesday, March 28th (2023) at around 8.45pm.

According to her report she spotted the beast on top of a "low structure".

"I can't give any more detail because it was completely backlit by the industrial area, behind what looked like a factory or a mine, but the animal was way bigger than a dog.

"I kept trying to look again but the hedges were too high. She told an online reporting site: "I was a passenger driving down from the Chirk Caravan site – next to the estate – and I saw a very large animal on top of a low structure.

But this is not the first time big cats have been spotted around Chirk with two further encounters being reported to the online site in recent months.

The first came from a man who reported another sighting in December near Chirk town centre - just 800 metres from where the big cat was seen in March.

That encounter happened at around 10.30pm on Friday, December 30, 2022, when the member of the public said the animal crossed Trevor Road into the churchyard, coming from the direction of the Ceiriog Valley.

The man explained: "The animal walked across Trevor Road, and was startled by my car headlights.

"It ran away into the churchyard to the side of the road.

"I got a very good view and I'm certain that it was a leopard – it was too big to be a pet cat and the wrong build."

And just a month prior to that, on Wednesday, November 23, 2022, at around 8.15pm, a large black animal was reportedly spotted near the Chirk woods, by a man walking his dog.

He said: "I was walking my dog on the field next to my house and I heard branches snap in the woods behind my house.

"My dog was nervous at this point and then I heard a large thud against the wall that lines the woods behind my back garden.

"I shone my torch up and there was something large and black looking at me and my dog for a good 10 seconds, my dog was nervous and was backing up towards me slowly and cowered between my legs and it just dropped down back into the woods without making a sound."

'Big cat' spotted as sheep found 'skinned'

The above headline appeared online on the Bristol Live website on the 28th April 2023.

"We could be talking about a new indigenous species"

Claimed the reports authors Felix Nobes, Ed Cullinane and Emma Grimshaw the content editor.

A Welsh farmer has described the moment she spotted a 'puma or another big cat' near her home. And after posting about the incident on social media, she was left stunned by how many other people have seen something similar.

Suzanne Kay, who lives in Penuwch, said people replied saying they had found their sheep killed after being skinned by an unknown animal. There have been so many sightings that locals have now called it the 'The Beast of Bont'. Suzanne said: "I was washing up and looking out of my kitchen window, and I thought to myself, 'that's a bloody big cat'.

"It played on my mind, and I thought about it and looked at the perspective, and I realised I shouldn't have been able to see a cat all that distance away with such clarity. It was unmistakably feline, jet black and it had a long black tail carried out the back. It was about the height of a Labrador - but much longer.

"I posted about it on Facebook with a picture of a panther from Google, and I didn't expect the response I got – I expected to be ridiculed. I didn't expect the depth of belief, the examples, the stories, the recollections of dates and places and people and names.

"We could be talking about a new indigenous species. The wild cats of Wales."

Ceredigion farmer Jonathan Davies also recently discovered that several of his sheep had been 'skinned' by an unknown animal. Jonathan contacted Dyfed-Powys Police in February after several of his sheep were brutally killed at his farm in Ponterwyd.

He claims that a police officer told him that it was probably a 'big cat' that winters in Carmarthenshire's Brechfa Forest, before migrating to Myherin Forest in the mountains for the summer. The officer allegedly blamed the issue on 'discarded pets' abandoned by owners during the 1970's before the Dangerous Wild Animals Act was passed in 1976.

Jonathan said: "I phoned a few farmers and a friend in Devil's Bridge, and she said she'd been having trouble for about 15 years. She said she loses about six sheep a year. She had inspectors at her farm, looking at these carcasses, and they told her it was a cat.

"She told me to call the police and report it, so when I called up, I said to the policewoman, 'you're going to think I've lost the plot here'.

"But she said I can see it all on the log that there are loads of reports and it's always happening. She told me a woman in Carmarthen had lost eight (sheep) in the space of a week - and she had put remote cameras up to try and catch a glimpse of it.

There have been numerous cases since including the killing of 12 sheep in 1981 in the village of 'Bont' - giving the beast its name - and the slaughter of 20 in 2012. Local organization 'Puma Watch' claims to have had 50 sightings since March 2020. The UK Ministry of Agriculture in the 1980s concluded that whatever killed the sheep 'must have been a great deal more powerful than a fox or a dog'.

University of Wales Trinity Saint David academic and bone expert, Dr Ros Coard, also conducted a study in 2007 on sheep carcasses found in the Aeron Valley and concluded big cats were 'responsible' for the bite marks. Despite the claims, Dyfed-Powys Police deny the existence of any 'big cat sighting' log - though have previously issued some guidance for those who have seen 'the animal' and are appealing for the public to photograph it and report sightings.

A spokesperson for the force said: "We wouldn't be able to confirm any suspected big cat sightings at this time. We don't have anyone specifically trained in shooting big cats, however, our firearms officers are trained in animal destruction for animals that are suffering or dangerously out of control."

DO YOU HAVE ANY SIGHTING REPORTS FROM THE UK, HAVE YOU WITNESSED THESE ELUSIVE CATS YOURSELF?

The Enigma of the Rosslyn Portal

By Brian Allan

Authors Note

There are two histories attached to Rosslyn Chapel, one is founded in convention, while the other is a much less well-defined. It is an esoteric, shadow history and it is from this tradition that I draw the information in this article. I should also mention that the 'shadow tradition' is much more enlightening and suggests that among the items allegedly secreted in the vaults deep below the chapel, is a literal and physical 'Gateway to Heaven' and as it turned out, this may well have a lot more than just a hint of truth about it.

Rosslyn Chapel

Many ancient building scattered around the world have, for a variety of reasons, aroused curiosity and interest, these range from the stolid, inscrutable, almost mystical impassivity of the pyramids on the Giza plateau, to the baroque grandeur of the Vatican in Rome and Chartres Cathedral in Paris. There, is however, one item to add to this impressive list, and that is a medieval church nestled approximately 15 miles to the south of Edinburgh in Scotland: Rosslyn Chapel. To the casual visitor it looks like what it is, a small, ornate place of worship and splendid example of medieval stone carving, but to the seekers of Gnosis it is rather more. For them it contains a secret encoded into the carvings that adorn almost every available space, for them the secret is spiritual knowledge. They are almost certainly correct, but the knowledge might not be where (or what) they think and the decoding device might rely on something more than a notional, catalytic 'Rosetta Stone' to decipher the nature of this enlightenment.

My own quest for gnosis began in the 1980's when I first became aware of the Chapel and it's alleged connection to both the Freemasons and the Knights Templar, both concepts that, in this instance, may or may not have provenance. Certainly there are examples of what appear to be Masonic heraldry and symbols carved into the stone, but these can be interpreted in a variety of ways. The same goes for the alleged Templar links, an association that segues into the family of the builder and financier of the Chapel, Sir William Sinclair, the third and last Prince of Orkney. While these connections may be accurate they are not the only secrets in this chapel, not even close, and keep in mind that nothing is there by accident.

The Search Begins

During my initial visit to the chapel in 1986, I had no clear idea of what to expect and was amazed at both the spiritually charged atmosphere in the building and the sheer volume of the carvings. But it was not until the following decade that I found the first inkling that within the chapel there exists a doorway spanning two realties. But first things first, during a subsequent visit in 1998, I was accompanied by four talented mediums and my wife and, once again, the first impression (especially from the mediums) was one of immense, latent, almost palpable spiritual energy that had somehow been leeched from the devotions of the faithful into the very stones of the building. The feeling was real and tangible, closely mirroring the powerful spirituality felt inside the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem. Another feeling from the mediums was that the building did not exist entirely in the 'here and now', but instead was 99.99% here and 0.1% 'elsewhere' and, as it turned out, this was a remarkable display of prescience by the mediums. Another observation was that if a camera were set to record the stained glass windows 24/7, they would record minute differences, a colour would change or a blade of grass would wither and die.

Two more discoveries were made in the northeast corner of the Lady Chapel and as with some discoveries they came about by accident…or did they? As we walked around the chapel an American woman, who was also in the chapel, started singing as she absorbed the atmosphere. As she hit one particular note the entire chapel 'lit up' sonically, and the tones and overtones washed and lapped around us. When she stopped singing the tones did not stop immediately, but continued to ebb and flow until they gradually died away, this was the first clue and one of precursors to what came several years later. One of the mediums said that this was extremely significant and that the chapel was 'sonically active', and that sound was vital in revealing the secret, whatever that might be. She was absolutely right!

The second incident occurred around 20 minutes later when I was literally lifted from my feet as I stood with my back to against the St Matthew altar. The medium who had realised that sound was important, suggested that I stand there and when I did my arms instantly drifted up from my sides, then my heels felt as if they were being pushed up from the floor; this continued until I stumbled forward. I was dumbstruck but elated, and when my wife stood on the same spot, although she did not experience the same sense of her heels being pushed up, she could not hold her arms by her sides; crucially she had no idea what had happened to me only moments previously. The medium explained that this was a 'weak spot', a doorway of some kind between this world and another; in fact she could see hands being thrust through a 'shimmering curtain' (her words) asking to be brought to this side. She called it an 'Astral Doorway', perhaps an example of language acting as a barrier to what may well be an applied but forgotten technology.

What to make of it? Significantly, each of the mediums independently recognised that this small area at the St. Matthew altar was in some way 'different' and even more significantly, none of the mediums had ever been in Rosslyn Chapel prior to this and although the four of them comprised two married couples, neither couple had heard of or met the other. By this time, although there legitimately and with permission, we were attracting unwelcome attention from the other visitors so we decided to leave with the intention of returning at a later point. As it transpired, although I had visited the Chapel in the intervening period, this 'later point' occurred some seven years after this visit and with a much more focussed, informed and awe inspiring result, we discovered the secret in the chapel and more importantly how to use it.

Gnosis

After the initial and highly instructive visit to Rosslyn, the events were recorded and filed, but for various reasons there was no immediate rush to follow up on what had been found. Although the incident at the St. Matthew altar was not forgotten, no plans were made to follow up on it until I made a chance discovery while reading a book entitled, 'In The Name of The Gods', by David Elkington. Among many fascinating points raised by Elkington in this excellent and thought-provoking book, were two that struck an immediate chord, (no pun intended). One was the fact that medieval churches were, as a rule, designed to specific proportions, the so-called 'Golden Mean' or 'Sacred Proportion'. This equates to an approximate ratio of 1: 1.6

The reason for this, Elkington speculated, was to deliberately enhance sounds of a specific frequency. The second point he made was that the Roman Catholic Church absolutely forbade a musical interval called the 'Devils Chord', (Diabolica et Musica), which is in fact an augmented fourth or tri-tone, (there are various definitions) to be used in any musical works throughout Europe. The reason for this appears to have been that this particular frequency could cause some people to experience altered states of consciousness, perhaps thereby having an unauthorised and personal religious or spiritual experience. The fact that some churches were constructed using the 'Golden Mean' only enhanced the effect, and this, according to the dogma of the Church, was not permissible since it undermined their own authority. Incidentally, the augmented fourth can be heard in the opening sequence music for the peerless and extremely funny Simpsons animated TV series, and also in the opening section of 'Smoke on The Water' by the rock band Deep Purple.

Let's fast forward now to 2005, in the intervening years, although there had not been another hands-on investigation, I had not stopped my research and in that time I discovered that carvings in the Lady Chapel (or retro-choir), located in the east of the main chapel, contained more information than met the eye. Several years earlier, the late Mr. Steven Prior realised that the intricate carvings on the hundreds of small cubes in the ceiling of the Lady Chapel were a form of musical code. The fact that the cubes emanated from carved musical instruments played by small stone angels situated atop columns tended to corroborate his theory. To this end Mr. Prior hired a photographer, a computer programmer and a musicologist to decode the carvings on the cubes and although he was of the opinion that they formed a 'healing cadence', unfortunately I do not know what became of this early attempt to decode the symbols.

The patterns themselves appear to have been formed by exploiting a sonic phenomenon called 'Chladni Patterns' or 'Figures', and it is important to realise that this technology would have been available to the builders on the chapel, although it was not formally recognised and named until the late 19th century. The person who discovered this oddity was a German physicist and musician, Ernst Chladni, sometimes dubbed the father of modern acoustics. The patterns are created by sprinkling fine powder on a thin metal plate held firmly at one point then 'played' using a bow. A whole range of musical notes can therefore be recreated as graphic analogues using this method. Note: There is a modern version of this called 'cymatics' and it is done using a signal generator and a vibrating plate and, oddly enough, it is much more adaptable and is capable of producing patterns identical to those on the cubes in the Chapel.

With this in mind I originally hypothesised that the cubes were indeed designed to convey a secret message, but in my opinion it was intended to convey the disapproval of Sir William Sinclair, whose family had been closely involved with the enigmatic Knights Templar, at the proscription of the order by the Catholic Church at the behest of King Philip of France in 1307. Due to the all-embracing grip of the Church on every aspects of life and his desire to avoid charges of heresy etc, Sir William did this by inserting the Devils Chord frequency into the patterns, thereby effectively thumbing his nose at the church, however as it transpired there was considerably more to it than that.

After obtaining official permission I invited a small group of fellow researchers including a psychologist/ hypnotherapist, two of the mediums who had been present in 1998, a sonic therapist and the musician who had assisted in recreating the augmented fourth to witness the new experiment in the Chapel. When we arrived outside of opening hours we set up a laptop computer, a signal generator and a set of speakers, then recreated the augmented forth.

Immediately one of the mediums said that the 'doorway' had opened and was at the by-now-familiar location of the St. Matthew altar. When we approached the altar we could all feel a powerful shaft of icy-cold air rising from the brass plate covering the burial vault that is located there. The area of the 'doorway' was clearly defined, if you pushed your hand outside the 'doorway' you felt warmer air then, drawing your hand back inside the 'doorway', the temperature was much reduced, there was a very clear shut-off point.

Unknown to me and the rest of the group, one of our number had gone down into the crypt and started 'toning' using his voice aided by a tuning fork. We could hear this but, what really astonished us was that a few seconds after he started toning a third tone began. We were amazed and even more so, when a few seconds later, yet another tone started. These were not caused by us, but by the chapel itself, I assume they were harmonics generated by the chapel as it reacted to the two tones coming for the computer and the sound from the crypt. We were dumbfounded, then, just as suddenly, the group member in the crypt (Jason) stopped toning (he had not been aware of what had just occurred upstairs), and the two extra harmonics also stopped. We did not have time to try this again due to the fact that the Chapel was opening for paying customers and we had to stop. After some discussion we came to the conclusion that the chapel did indeed conceal many unsuspected properties, but could take it no further than that.

After this remarkable experiment I contacted Patrick McNamara, a London based physical medium (and now sadly deceased) and sent him, via email, a jpeg image of the altar; I did not say or imply what it was, where it was, or give any other details. The medium had no idea of what we had done nor at that time had he ever been to Scotland, never mind Rosslyn Chapel. His response was astonishing; he felt that this was a 'portal' of some kind and that it was guarded by a man wearing a white robe with a red cross on the front, his name was 'Spencer'. He also stated that the portal led to information held 'elsewhere', but could be no more specific than that. This was remarkable, but more was to come. Following the publication of my book, 'Rosslyn, Between Two Worlds', I was contacted by a gentleman living in Connecticut, USA, who was convinced that there were certain 'keys' hidden in the chapel and these keys could only be deciphered using 'red coherent light'. To me this implied a ruby laser, but how, from where?

Initially I rejected this information, but two weeks later I discovered that a long-forgotten artefact in the chapel had been rediscovered, a 'light box' located above the circular Rose Window at east of the chapel (above the 'Lady Chapel'). Twice a year for purposes unknown this 'light box' allows a shaft of red light to enter the chapel and even the official guides tell groups of visitors that this may have used to illuminate 'an object of some kind' suspended from the ceiling of the main chapel. It seemed that we now had the makings of a real phenomenon, the existence of some kind of portal, a gateway between two realities, and incredibly, sound and light, were the two means to activate it. It may even be possible that the sound and light might open invisible and unsuspected doorways in any building constructed using the same ratios. It is something that may pay dividends in future projects and I relish the challenge.

Note: the frequencies we used were:
F#: 370Hz
C: 523Hz
A: 880Hz
We had also intended to use specific words converted to numbers and frequencies using an ancient technique called 'Gematria', they were 373Hz, which is 'word' in Greek, 515Hz, which is Jesus in absolute Gematria, and 888Hz, which in Greek is 'Iesous', which translates as 'Jesus'. It is also interesting that all of these are only a few Hz away from those used in the Chapel. Unfortunately we never did get the chance to try them, although I did make a CD of them (and other, similar frequencies). Some mediums obtained a copy of the CD and have used the frequencies shown above (plus others on the CD) during séances and have informed me that they obtained some surprising results!

Haunted Canary Islands

By Paul Dale Roberts

When I went on my vacation to Madrid, Spain to Morocco, I wanted to visit the Canary Islands. Unfortunately, I was on a budget and couldn't get over to the Canary Islands. To see a detailed story about my vacation to Spain & Morocco, stop by here: www.hackwriters.com/madrid05.htm

My uncle, former Merchant Marine, Jose Causing told me that I would love the Canary Islands, because it's a hotspot for UFOs and ghosts galore. I made two friends in Morocco. Their names are Taleb Halimi and Mandil Shriki. To this day, we still communicate on Facebook.

My uncle Jose said when he visited the Canary Islands that he did see shadow people in the caves of Tenerife. The caves are very haunted, because many Guanche people were slaughtered by the Spaniards. Taleb says that when he visited the caves, he was attacked by a shadow person. Taleb said in one part of this cave, he felt like he was being strangled and felt a sharp pain on the side of his stomach.
Taleb feels he was being attacked by a Guanche and that the sharp pain on the side of his stomach felt like a dagger. When he left that area of the cave, he felt normal again.

Mandil tells me that when he visited the town of Guimar, he was awe struck by Guimar's pyramids. Mandil tells me that these pyramids are also associated with UFO/UAP activity. Mandil has talked with locals who have seen three disc shaped objects hovering over the pyramids and then with a blink of an eye, they vanish. Besides UFO/UAP activity, you have ghosts.

There is a ravine near the town of Barranco de Badajoz. Mandil says that legend has it, that a young girl was told by her parents to gather fruit from the trees of the ravine. This incident happened around 1895.

The girl went to do her errand for her parents and then vanished. Twenty years later, the same young girl that vanished reappeared in the town. She looked the same as when she disappeared. When questioning this girl, the girl did not realize that she was gone for 20 years, she thought she was gone only for a few hours. The locals believe she was abducted by a UFO or that the area of Barranco is a portal to another dimension.

Some Ufologists believe she was taken by a UFO and travelled at light speed into outer space, where time has slowed down. A few hours in space traveling at light speed, would be many years here on Earth. That would explain why she looks the same way as when she vanished 20 years ago. Mandil believes that the pyramids are built on a ley line. Sightings of ghosts and UFOS have also been seen here at Barranco de Badajoz.

The Guimar Pyramids of the Canary Islands, Spain

I explained to Mandil that skeptics believe that the pyramids have no mystical connection to UFOs, ghosts or anything else.
They believe that farmers gathered some volcanic rocks when clearing their land and built the pyramids. Some skeptics also believe that the pyramids are not that old and date back to the 19th century. The reason why they came up with that theory is because they found pottery near the pyramids that date back to that time period. They found the pottery during the University of La Laguna excavations.

The mysterious ravine near the town of Barranco de Badajoz, Spain.

The late Philip Coppens, the Belgian Author visited Tenerife in 2009 and did his own research and investigation, this is what he said:

"The fact is that on one plaza between two pyramids, archaeologists dug down into the structure, but stopped at a level they equated with the 18th century – and which was between 50 and 150 (30cm equates to 12 inches or 1 foot-Ed) centimetres deep. From this, the mistaken conclusion was reached that they had dug down all the way to the bottom and had realized the oldest layer was two centuries old. Nothing can be further from the truth."

HISTORY OF THE GUANCHE PEOPLE

During 1000 BC, the Guanche people migrated to the Canary Islands. With their arrival, their hunting caused the extinction of a 3-foot-long giant lizard species and the Tenerife giant rats that grew to 3 feet and 9 inches long. My uncle Jose says that locals claim that they still see the giant rats around the caves of Tenerife. Taleb claims that he also saw a giant rat near the caves. Taleb says that when he saw the giant rat, it scared him to death. Taleb felt his life was in danger and that the rat would eat him. Taleb now thinks that the giant rat he saw was a ghost rat.

There were many deaths that occurred on the Canary Islands. There were squirmishes and battles. Two battles were:
The First Battle of Acentejo, Tenerife
1402 The Castilians Sought to Conquer the Canary Islands.
Special Note: The Castilians conquered Lanzarote & Fuerteventura rather quickly and finally conquered the rest of the islands by 1496.

Taleb and Mandil say that the Canary Islands are very haunted and if any paranormal investigator wants to encounter UFOs/UAP, shadow people, ghosts and ghost rats, you are welcome to investigate! It's all here at the Canary Islands! Special Note: Taleb and Mandil have vacationed at the Canary Islands twice and plan to go back one more time.

STILL RESEARCHING THE DECHMONT WOODS UFO INCIDENT... ...44 YEARS ON

Report by SPI founder, Malcolm Robinson.

Who would have thought that I would still be working on one of Scotland's biggest ever UFO cases 44 years on?

But, that is what happened when SPI's medium Steven Bird and I, Malcolm Robinson, descended on Dechmont Woods near Livingston, Central Scotland on April 23rd, 2023, to try, what some would say, was an 'off the wall' research project, but more of that in a moment.

Most UFOlogists are aware that on the morning of November 9th, 1979, forestry foreman Robert (Bob) Taylor, encountered what he described as a hovering disc shaped object in Dechmont Woods near Livingston in Central Scotland. Two small spiky sphere-shaped objects descended from the main object and interacted with Bob after which he lost consciousness. The case was picked up by the local police and was treated as a case of an assault by person (or persons!) unknown. It is the only case in the British Isles that had a full investigative police and forensic scientific study.

I was one of the main researchers of this case at that time and did what I could to try and get an answer as to what Robert Taylor saw. There was never any clear-cut definitive answer to the case, lots of speculations, but never an answer that convinced everyone. Having interviewed Bob a number of times, I was convinced of his sincerity, and as such, I believe that he saw something not of this world. All this is explained in my book, 'The Dechmont Woods UFO Incident' available on Amazon.

OFF THE WALL RESEARCH, OR A GREAT IDEA!

So, this brings me to a new investigative study into this case. An investigation, that certainly we at SPI had never tried before. What follows, will no doubt cause many a raised eyebrow amongst many UFOlogists, both here in the U.K. and overseas, and to some, this research project may seem off the wall, if not futile in the extreme and downright stupid. But let us remember, when one is doing any investigation into fantastic claims, then one should always think out of the box.

We should ask ourselves, 'what else needs to be done to solve this investigation'? What are we missing? What can we bring to the table that might provide further information in clearing up this 44-year-old mystery? So, what am I talking about here? What is so controversial that Malcolm Robinson and Steven Bird had in mind to hopefully provide further answers to this age-old mystery?

Well, we decided to metal detect the ground where Robert Taylor's UFO had hovered, not only that, but for SPI's medium Steven Bird to contact the spirit of Robert Taylor to ask him questions about that day and boy did we get some interesting information.

Look, I know a lot of people reading this won't believe a thing about what is to follow in this report. Yes, it is controversial, yes, it is 'off the wall'. But look, in this complicated world of UFOlogy and spirit, there is no harm in using any tools available to try and get some answers. Not to use any tools just because some people might say they are foolish, should not detract from their use.

Get all the cards out on the table, leave them there for people to look at. So, I ask you now, to park your scepticism whilst reading the following report, and just accept that all avenues of investigation should be explored, for in not doing so is not doing any case, never mind the Dechmont Woods case, any justice.

OK, sit back, strap up and enjoy the controversial ride.

LET'S START AT THE BEGINNING. MEETING STEVEN BIRD.

When I came back to Scotland after 23 years living in England, I decided to start up some local UFO and paranormal meetings at my hometown in Sauchie, Clackmannanshire, Central Scotland. Fellow researcher

IMAGE: Steven Bird and Malcolm Robinson

Ron Halliday brought along one gentleman by the name of Steven Bird who I would learn, was a gifted psychic medium.

We soon became friends and in due course Steven assisted SPI by coming along on our investigations and lending his mediumistic abilities to a few of our cases. During the course of one of my local lectures, Steven said that the spirit of Robert (Bob) Taylor was with him, and was enjoying my lectures, although I was surprised, I wasn't perturbed by this, as being a Spiritualist myself, I was firmly of the conviction that there is a life after death.

Anyway, let's move the story on. I broached the subject of metal detecting the part of Dechmont Woods where Robert Taylor saw his UFO with both Ron and Steven. Now, as far as I know, metal detecting at the UFO scene in Dechmont Woods has never been done before, if it has, and yes, there is every likelihood that it has, I wasn't aware of it.

I had recently come into the possession of a metal detector and had tried it out and found a few things, which admittedly, were a load of junk, tin cans and the like. But I had the idea that "Hey, why not, let's give this a try at Dechmont, you just never know". Both Steven and Ron liked the idea and were well up for it.

I am a member of the National Council of Metal Detecting (the NCMD) as I felt that I should join up with a reputable body. As it turned out, Ron sadly couldn't join us on the day as he had a prior engagement, Ron incidentally also has a metal detector. I should also point out at this juncture, that for a good few months leading up to us going to Dechmont Woods, Bob Taylor had made his spirit presence aware to Steven, and was telling Steven that about metal being found in the trees or a tree at the scene where he had his encounter with this large object. Bob was insistent that we would definitely find metal in either trees or a tree at the site, but more of this later.

METAL DETECTING THE DECHMONT WOODS UFO SITE.

So, on the morning of Sunday the 23rd of April 2023, Steven Bird picked me up from my home at Sauchie, Central Scotland and we drove towards our destination which was the car park near Deans Community High School. This car park gives easy access into Dechmont Woods.

Whilst we were driving, Steven said that the spirit of Bob Taylor was with us in the car, and that he was sitting in the back seat and was pleased that we were engaging in this activity. Now, what you the reader should know, is that Steven Bird, prior to moving from England to Scotland, had never heard of the Dechmont Woods case. His main passion was proving that the spirit lives on.

Steven is a platform medium and provides proof of Life After Death to churches up and down Scotland. It should also be noted that Steven has also had a number of UFO sightings himself. It wasn't until Steven met Ron Halliday and I, that we furnished him with the Dechmont Woods Incident. He has never visited the site himself and although he has driven through Livingston due to his day job in sales, he never knew how to get to the area. There was never any need to.

All I told Steven on the journey to Dechmont, was that we needed to park up at a car park near a school, I wasn't going to tell him anymore and that it was up to his spirit friends to get him there. And here's the rub, Steven had an ace up his sleeve in the spirit of Robert (Bob) Taylor, the sole witness to the Dechmont Woods UFO.

As we approached the town of Deans (a town that Steven has never driven in before) The spirit of Bob Taylor was telling Steven where each and every turn off was. I, sitting in the passenger seat, kept stum. At one point Bob was telling Steven to turn left, but stupidly I broke my silence and said, "No go right". Well, we got lost.

Had we gone the way Bob told us, he would have been spot on. From then on, Steven listened to what Bob had to say and withing a few minutes we were pulling into the car park near Deans Community School. Quite incredible.

Apart from our intention to use my metal detector and Steven's mediumistic abilities, we also planned to do a few EVP experiments, (Electronic Voice Phenomena). For the uninitiated, this is where sometimes researchers can obtain spirit voices on tape. Before we alighted the car, Steven decided to try an EVP experiment even although he now didn't feel Robert's spirit presence in the car anymore. He quite rightly said that for any spirit to come near the Earth plane, takes up a lot of energy, and can be quite draining, but nonetheless, we decided to try.

After reviewing the recording on my iPhone, all we could hear were our own voices, sadly Robert's voice wasn't there. We alighted the car and I reiterated to Steven that I was not going to tell him which path to go to get to the scene of the incident, he was going in blind so to speak. I kept his attention away from the marker posts which state 'UFO trail this way'. As we got to the top of the rise, there were footpath trails leading off in different directions. I asked Steven, "OK, which was now my friend"? To which he replied, "Bob's telling me go right".

Bob had by this time came back, and was now telling Steven which way to go. Now remember dear reader,

Steven had never been to Dechmont Woods before, and for those who have, you will know that there are footpath trails leading off in a number of directions. So, we passed Deer Hill on our right and came in front of one part of the woods, at which point again, there were trails leading off in different directions. I again asked, "OK Steve, where now"? "We turn right" he quickly said.

So far, he was spot on. We trundled on through the woods where Steven was insistent that we go the way Bob was telling us to. Then suddenly Steven stopped dead in his tracks. I asked him if he was alright, to which he replied that he was taking on Bob's condition that he experienced on the way back to his home that day after he saw the object in the woods. He felt Bob's fear of what he had seen. Steven said that his legs felt heavy, thankfully the condition eased, and Steven was able to continue walking down the forestry ride, and before too long, we were standing in front of the scene of the famous 1979 encounter.

THE AREA HAS CHANGED A LOT SINCE 1979

I stated to Steven that the site that he was now looking at, was very different to what it was way back in 1979. Today, the trees are much taller and have encroached on the area. Of course, we now have at the site, the stone cairn and some signage.

For those not in the know, the stone cairn and plaque was requested to be placed there by SPI to commemorate this incident. And with the help of the Livingston Development Corporation, they duly placed it there back in 1993. Standing next to the cairn was the signage board detailing the Dechmont Woods UFO incident.

Again, I Malcolm Robinson had badgered the West Lothian Council to put up this signage at the site, along with other marker posts and signage to allow members of the public to find the area. (Which I have to say, shamefully, I am very proud of.)

As soon as Steven walked into the area beneath where this hovering UFO was situated back in 1979, he said that all his senses were tingling, that even now, here in 2023, there was still a residue of intense 'energy' permeating the area. It wasn't a spiritual energy he asserted, but something very different. Before long, Steven was walking around the area reiterating about this energy and again sensing the fear that Bob Taylor experienced on that day.

One thing that I found most interesting and thought that Steven had got wrong, was the location where Robert fell unconscious to the ground. I've always been led to believe that the area where he fell was near the cairn, not 20 yards further into the clearing on the right hand side.

Steven continued by saying that the two spiky spheres that had descended from the object were rolling about in a different area to the generally accepted version of events which was the main clearing. He said that they were also rolling about further over to the right of the clearing as you stand looking at it from the cairn. Now of course, this may well have been the case.

Once Bob lost consciousness, these spiky spheres could have been rolling all over the place, and not just in the central part of the clearing. Another astonishing statement from Steven, again not in keeping with the official version of events, was when he told me that Bob was saying to him, that he now recalled seeing the object when he regained consciousness, and saw it lift up into the sky where it disappeared at a terrific speed.

As stated, in the official narrative, that was not the case. Bob states that when he regained consciousness the larger object was gone as were the two spiky spheres. So, what are we to make of this? You either accept it as the testimony from the spirit of Robert (Bob) Taylor or you don't. I did say at the start of this article that this would be controversial and that there would be some who would not accept this.

We also tried some more EVP experiments at the site but did not pick up anything.

FALSE SIGNALS.

As Steven was walking around the site 'tuning in', I got on with my metal detecting of the site. Needless to say, I was getting many hits from my metal detector, all of which were little bits of tinfoil and a few beer tins. This was to be expected as thousands of people have visited this site from not just the U.K. but from overseas as well, and as such, the litter/debris that they have left behind over the years, has infiltrated into the soil.

To be honest, I could have dug up all the hits from my detector, but this would have taken me all day. More frustrating, was the fact that my metal detector was picking up 'false signals' Detectorists call this the 'Halo Effect', this is caused by iron objects in the soil which contains moisture. Some type of soil contains magnetic properties, and this can lead to some metal detector devices giving false readings of mineralisation's in the soil.

Although the ground was not soaking wet, there had been intermittent rain showers that morning. Of course, it is the duty of every metal detectorist to ensure that any hole/plug that we make, gets carefully replaced and patted down. This I did with the few holes that I did dig. At the site of the Dechmont Woods Incident I interviewed Steven to get his early psychic impressions. Here is what he said.

INTERVIEW ON SITE WITH STEVEN BIRD.

Abbreviations (MR) Malcolm Robinson. (SB) Steven Bird.

(SB) "I'm tingling like you wouldn't believe".

(MR) "It's the 23rd of April 2023, I'm here in Dechmont Woods with SPI's medium Steven Bird and he is going to tell us shortly what he has psychically been picking up. Steven, we are sanding here in the epicentre of where this event happened way back in November 1979. Now you mentioned coming down the forestry ride about what you were feeling. Could you just reiterate what that was, and what you are getting just now"?

(SB) "Bob was with you and me in the car most of the way over here, and although I work on the road, and I do know where Deans is but before I came to Scotland, I had never heard of the Dechmont Incident. I spoke to Bob a number of times during your lectures, so I got to know him a wee bit even although he has passed. When we were coming here, he actually took us to an alternative path through a different school that would have taken us up to the same route. But he got us here with a combination of second left third left etc and he was giving me the directions to actually get here. Now I didn't look at the sign posts on the way in. Now I am drawn to the right hand side of this field, this tree area (points to area) But this log that is lying down here and this area, really means something to Bob as well.

But when we were walking down the path just up there, I was drawn to the path of the middle path of the three to come back out, and it was the scariest walk that he had ever had. He was limping, and he said he had a cut on his right leg, and he had a slight pulled muscle and he was slightly worried about getting home because he wasn't compos mentis and his whole world had been turned upside down.

He was worried about his wife and his dog, and there was a lot of fear going around in his mind. Nothing made sense anymore. He was just wanting to get home and get home safely. There was a small doubt in his mind that he wasn't going to. What he had seen that day, cut him right down to the core.

I am on maximum tingle at this point for want of a better phrase. I am seeing the shape of Bob lying on the ground, and its right about this area, round about where that moss and stump is. I'm seeing him, and he is opening his eyes. He just doesn't know what is going on. The object is still with him at this point.

He is extremely frightened, and very soon after he wakes up, he saw that the object was still there, but I feel that it was on its way to leaving. Apart from the things that we already know about the story, he wasn't sure if he saw it when he woke up, but he is telling me that 'he did'. When he was here he wasn't sure entirely about the end of it, but now he is telling me that yes, he did see it, and he saw it go, but he didn't see it go, if that makes sense.

It was there, and then it wasn't there. And what he did tell me, a number of months ago at one of your lectures, that there was 'something' in the trees. It wasn't on the ground; it was in the trees. So, I am now going to start looking and feeling my way around here and see if I can find anything. So that's all I can tell you just now, other than this area, still has a massive energy.

If you bring a hundred mediums here, a hundred of them will pick it up. They will feel it, it is palpable. It's still here. I don't know what kind or type of energy it is. It doesn't feel like a spirit energy, it feels like, well I'm going to use the word, 'cosmic'. Like something has disturbed the very energy in this area, and it's still here".

IMAGE: Steven Bird pointing to unusual item in felled tree?

(MR) "That's amazing Steven. Steven thanks very much. So, what I feel you should do now, is to walk around and get a feel for this place and do your thing, whilst I will take some photographs. I should point out that this is something that SPI had to do. We had to come back here and try something different. I'll be trying my metal detector shortly; Steven is going to try and tune in as well. As far as I know, this site has never been metal detected before, now it may well have, but we don't know. So, it will be a good exercise just to say, 'well we've done it' and also bringing forward Steven and his mediumistic abilities, we may, or we may not get anything.

What I can safely say is, that Bob has been with Steven on the journey here in the car and also coming down the forestry ride. I'm switching off the recording now, and its now time to see if we find anything".

MALCOLM, I HAVE BEEN VINDICATED!

At this point I left Steven to do his thing, and that was tune into the area whilst I swept the area with my metal detector. A few minutes later I heard Steven excitedly shout out that I should come over and see this. Steven had a big smile across his face and said that he was vindicated. He asked me to look down at the fallen tree trunk lying across the grass. At first, I saw nothing, then Steven asked me to look closer, and as I did so, I became aware of two coins that had been hammered into the trunk of the tree.

Initially I didn't see the significance of this, and my thoughts were interrupted by Steven as he excitedly asked me to remember what he had been saying to me for weeks, and that was that Bob Taylor had been telling him to look for something metal in the trees, or a tree, and when that was found it would be proof that Bob's spirit had been with Steven and that he was communicating direct with the spirit of Bob Taylor.

As I looked down at these coins hammered into the tree, I could see the meaning behind the message. I must admit, I had thought (somewhat naively) that we might be looking for some debris from the object that Bob had seen that day that had somehow came off the object and found itself lodged into a tree. Well, it wasn't that, that's for sure, but I guess the significance of this humanly find, was equally bizarre and encouraging in the sense of how the message had come about.

CLOSING WORDS.

At the end of the day there will be those who will scoff at this approach and who will say that there is no value in what we did that day. I tend to disagree.

With this type of research, one must always look to cover all bases, for not to do so is not in keeping with trying to find answers. Yes, I agree, maybe this psychic and metal detecting approach might be off the wall, and we are perhaps bringing together one mystery with another. I accept that, but I still think that it was something to try.

Yes, I could have dug up all those metal detecting contacts that I had, but as you have learned above, every contact that I did get was purely debris. However, I can assure you that I will be back, hopefully with Ron Halliday, where we will both metal detect the area good and proper, but more importantly, we will ensure that we will leave the ground the way we found it, and there will be no signs of soil disturbance.

Just as a footnote. Readers of my book on the Dechmont Woods UFO Incident, may recall that when SPI organised the cairn ceremony at the site back in 1993, SPI's then psychic, Helen Walters, witnessed a red ball weaving in and out of the trees at the site. She also witnessed a grey alien's face suddenly appear in the trees as well. So, I would say that there is a place for psychic mediums to attend, not just the Dechmont Woods site, but perhaps any significant UFO site and see what they pick up.

Their testimony might never be accepted, but what they will be doing, is presenting another piece of the puzzle that in due course, may prove relevant. So, an interesting day, with interesting results. I'm glad we did it.

UK UFO HOT SPOTS REVEALED

Edinburgh, London and Leicester are the UK's UFO hotspots, according to research. The study of 2,000 adults found 18 percent of residents in the Scottish city are convinced they've had a legitimate sighting. They are also most likely to believe aliens exist somewhere in the universe, even if they've never spotted one. Nationally, almost half (48 percent) believe aliens exist and 10 percent think they've witnessed something out of the ordinary, with six in 10 (59 percent) of these believing it was alien in origin.

The research was commissioned by National Geographic, ahead of the launch of new documentary series UFO's: Investigating the Unknown, which airs on the channel from Tuesday 2 May at 8pm. Viewers will be taken on a journey to uncover the truth behind the mysterious UFO phenomena that has captivated humanity for generations, as the top-secret Pentagon programme on UAPs (Unidentified Aerial Phenomena) of the US government is exposed. Nick Pope, said: "UFOs are big news now, and a lot of people are reporting - and sometimes filming - extraordinary things. "While many people are convinced these sightings involve alien life, most cases turn out to be misidentifications.

"The chances are that there's intelligent life elsewhere in the universe, and even though the vast distances make direct contact a challenge, encountering an alien civilization would be the biggest story in human history." The study found that cities in the north were much more likely to harbour UFO spotters - with just Bristol and London appearing in the top 10, from down south. Three in 10 (31 percent) of all adults polled percent believe humankind will at some point make contact with aliens from another planet or galaxy.

With Londoners most likely to believe in this eventuality, followed by those in Newcastle. UFO-believers in Leicester also most often believe they've found actual evidence or had an experience proving the existence of aliens. Of those who do believe in UFOs, 26 percent just have a 'gut feeling' telling them it's so. Another 12 percent find it comforting to believe there's other alien species out there just waiting to be discovered.

One in three respondents would like to see the Ministry of Defence's UFO Project, which investigated reports of UFO sightings, be re-opened - as it closed in 2009. And more than four in 10 (42 percent) suspect the government is keeping information around UFOs a well concealed secret. If the earth were to be visited by little green men and women, 41 per cent think they'd be here to carry out scientific study and 21 per cent fear they'd be harvesting the planet for raw materials.

While 14 per cent would imagine they were here for military reconnaissance, and 11 per cent wouldn't be surprised to see the entire human race taken into slavery. But if aliens asked their earthling counterparts to join the Galactic Federation - a supposed alliance of extra-terrestrial civilisations within the Milky Way - most Brits would want Sir David Attenborough representing the third planet from the sun. Second on the list was Professor Brian Cox, with Barack Obama placing third, according to the OnePoll.com data.

Nick Pope added: "Once again, Sir David Attenborough has been selected as representing the very best of humanity. "He's spent his life exploring and showcasing the furthest reaches of Planet Earth, so it's no surprise he's topped the poll for who'd be best to make first contact with ETs. Maybe he should move to Edinburgh, where the most people claim to have seen a UFO - he might just get his chance."

How aliens with 'right technology' could hear us on Earth

Watching your favourite show or listening to a good podcast? Well, scientists now think that radio, television and other signals could be detected by advanced alien life despite being light years away - if they exist. Advanced aliens could hear humans on Earth despite being light years away, scientists have suggested - if extraterrestrial life exists, that is. Did you know that humans have been unintentionally transmitting signals into space for nearly a century? Experts think if there are intelligent aliens on nearby stars with advanced technology, they could detect life on Earth through leaked radio signals and other transmissions from our day-to-day life. From radio and television to radars, these high-frequency signals can reach space. Most recently, mobile phones have also contributed to the leakage.

How was the study conducted?

For the study, scientists from the University of Manchester used crowd-sourced data to simulate radio leakage from mobile towers. Researchers wanted to determine what alien civilisations might detect from various stars that were close to Earth - including the Barnard's star, which is six light years away from Earth. To conduct this study, models were generated by Ramiro Saide, an intern at the Search for Extraterrestrial Intelligence (SETI) Institution's Hat Creek Radio Observatory in the US. The results also showed the Earth's mobile radio signature includes a substantial contribution from developing countries such as Africa. The team said this is exciting because it highlights the countries' success in moving directly into the digital age.

'We could become readily detectable'

Professor Mike Garrett, team leader of the project at the University of Manchester, said: "I've heard many colleagues suggest that the Earth has become increasingly radio quiet in recent years - a claim that I always contested. "Although it's true we have fewer powerful TV and radio transmitters today, the proliferation of mobile communication systems around the world is profound." Professor Garrett said while each system represents low radio powers, the "spectrum of billions of these devices is substantial." He added: "Current estimates suggest we will have more than 100,000 satellites in low Earth orbit and beyond before the end of the decade. "The Earth is already anomalously bright in the radio part of the spectrum; if the trend continues, we could become readily detectable by any advanced civilisation with the right technology."

'I believe that there's every chance advanced civilisations are out there' So, could this mean we're one step closer to finding extraterrestrial Intelligence? Dr Nalini Heeralall-Issur, associate professor at the University of Mauritius, said: "I believe that there's every chance advanced civilisations are out there and some may be capable of observing the human-made radio leakage coming from planet Earth."

What's next?

Researchers will investigate other sources of Earth's radio leakage signature as they look to build on the findings. This includes military radars, new digital broadcast systems, wi-fi networks, individual mobile handsets and satellite constellations.

'UFO caught on camera' as Red Arrows fly over King Charles's Coronation

Story by Max Channon, Ed Cullinane @ Daily Express online

A photographer claims to have accidentally caught on camera a 'UFO' flying over the Coronation of King Charles III, with the RAF's Red Arrows.

Simon Balson, 59, was taking pictures of the Red Arrows aerial display when he spotted the as-yet-unidentified flying object.

Simon says he has 'no idea' what the object but claims there have been a 'lot of unexplained sightings' recently in the area. Images show the Red Arrows aircraft flying towards the Mall in London - but slightly overhead a red object hovers above them.

Due to bad weather, Simon did not check the photos until Sunday (May 7). And when he did, he spotted the currently Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAP) in one frame.

He said: "I was shooting some photos from the 13th floor of my apartment building in Limehouse while the red arrows did their fly-over. The weather was bad so there were no birds in the air, and I couldn't really see the planes so I didn't check the photos until later.

"When I did though I spotted this weird object and just thought 'what the hell is that'. I enhanced the image and tried to increase the spec to see what it was, it looks like a floating acorn or something.

"All I could get is that it had a little bit of a red top, but I just have no idea what it could be. There have been lots of strange 'UFO' sightings recently, so I thought other people might be able to guess what it was."

Similar claims

A similar claim was also made of an incident at the Late Queen Elizabeths fly past during the former monarchs Platinum Jubilee celebrations during 2 June 2022.

A white sphere like craft moving incredibly fast shot across the smoke trail of the Red Arrow jets.

Now of course it could be a drone and of course TV drones were there at the time, but look at the screen-shot above. While the object doesn't look like a square drone. The object has a white colour like many of the UFOs seen around the world. But it also looks like a large plain white balloon.

FLIRTING WITH FAME

"Celebrity publicist Dan Harary's life is anything but ordinary. As a veteran of the Hollywood scene, he can tell you stories about working and rubbing elbows with some of the best known actors, studio executives, and other public figures in the world.

Dan has worked with a vice resident of the United States, rock stars, porn stars, pop culture icons, TV and movie actors, two Apollo astronauts who walked on the moon, and many others.

With tales of encounters with Bruce Springsteen, Steven Spielberg, Jerry Seinfeld, Jay Leno, Sid Caesar, Kirk Douglas, Jack Black, Dr. Ruth, Alice Cooper, Hugh Hefner, Brooke Shields, Bob Barker, Mel Brooks, Ann-Margret, Tom Hanks, Micky Dolenz and Brian Wilson, just to scratch the surface, many of his stories are funny, strange, off-beat or simply hard to believe, but they're all part of 50 years of his true-life adventures, both along the East Coast and in Hollywood. If you want to know what these stars are really like, Flirting With Fame is a book you can't pass by."– Dee Wallace, Actress, Teacher, Healer, Star of E.T. – The Extra-Terrestrial

AFTER THEY CAME

Jonathan Tuckerman, a Los Angeles man down on his luck and truly alone in life, decides to mark his 70th birthday by drowning himself in the Pacific Ocean.

Instead, he inadvertently becomes the world's "Wonder Man" after a pair of extra-terrestrial visitors from the Pleiades interdimensional star system appear in a giant spacecraft, pluck him from the sea, and present him to the media and the world as their sole "Ambassador to Mankind."

Jonathan's life is dramatically transformed for the better as he works closely with the magnificent Tall White aliens Jorthon and Kalyssa to solve man's long-insurmountable problems.
Jorthon and Kalyssa aren't the only aliens visiting Earth, however...

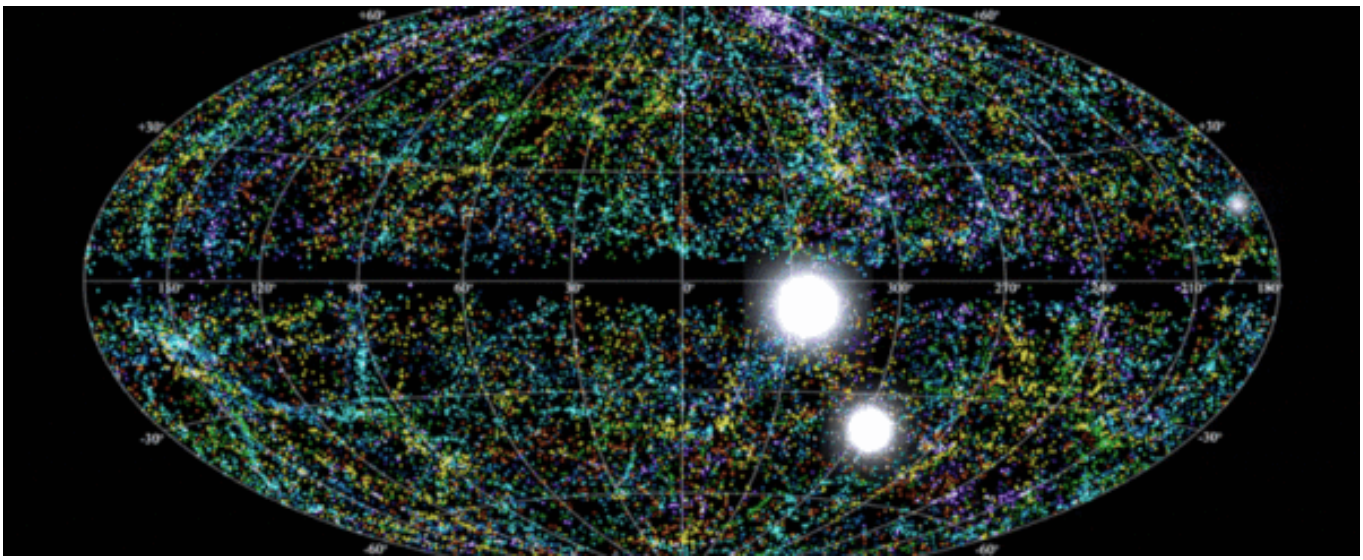
Mysterious Radio Signals in Space Keep Repeating – Astronomers Just Picked Up 25 More



By Matt Williams at Universe Today

The following article is used on a fair use basis and was originally released on 27 April 2023 at the Science Alert website here: CLICK

Like gravitational waves (GWs) and gamma-ray bursts (GRBs), fast radio bursts (FRBs) are one of the most powerful and mysterious astronomical phenomena today. These transient events consist of bursts that put out more energy in a millisecond than the Sun does in three days.

While most bursts last mere milliseconds, there have been rare cases where FRBs were found repeating. While astronomers are still unsure what causes them and opinions vary, dedicated observatories and international collaborations have dramatically increased the number of events available for study.

A leading observatory is the Canadian Hydrogen Intensity Mapping Experiment (CHIME), a next-generation radio telescope located at the Dominion Radio Astrophysical Observatory (DRAO) in British Columbia, Canada.

Thanks to its large field of view and broad frequency coverage, this telescope is an indispensable tool for detecting FRBs (more than 1,000 sources to date!).

Using a new type of algorithm, the CHIME/FRB Collaboration found evidence of 25 new repeating FRBs in CHIME data that were detected between 2019 and 2021.

The CHIME/FRB Collaboration comprises astronomers and astrophysicists from Canada, the US, Australia, Taiwan, and India.

Its partner institutions include the DRAO, the Dunlap Institute for Astronomy and Astrophysics (DI), the Perimeter Institute for Theoretical Physics, the Canadian Institute for Theoretical Astrophysics (CITA), the Anton Pannekoek Institute for Astronomy, the National Radio Astronomy Observatory (NRAO), the Institute of Astronomy and Astrophysics, the National Center for Radio Astrophysics (NCRA), and the Tata Institute of Fundamental Research (TIFR), and multiple universities and institutes.

Despite their mysterious nature, FRBs are ubiquitous and the best estimates indicate that events arrive at Earth roughly a thousand times a day over the entire sky. None of the theories or models proposed to date can fully explain all the properties of the bursts or the sources.

While some are believed to be caused by neutron stars and black holes (attributable to the high-energy density of their surroundings), others continue to defy classification. Because of this, other theories persist, ranging from pulsars and magnetars to GRBs and extraterrestrial communications.

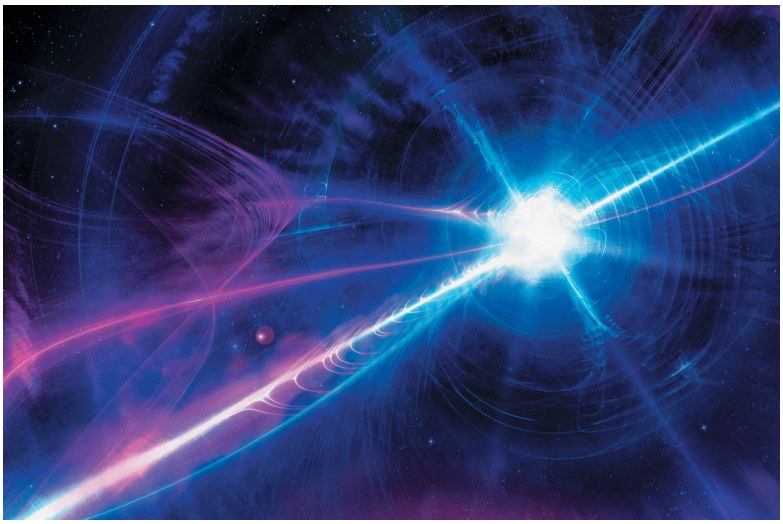
CHIME was originally designed to measure the expansion history of the Universe through the detection of neutral hydrogen.

Roughly 370,000 years after the Big Bang, the Universe was permeated by this gas, and the only photons were either the relic radiation from the Big Bang – the Cosmic Microwave Background (CMB) – or that released by neutral hydrogen atoms.

For this reason, astronomers and cosmologists refer to this period as the 'Dark Ages', which ended roughly 1 billion years after the Big Bang as the first stars and galaxies began re-ionizing neutral hydrogen (the Reionization Era).

Specifically, CHIME was designed to detect the wavelength of light that neutral hydrogen absorbs and emits, known as the 21-centimeter hydrogen line. This way, astronomers could measure how fast the Universe was expanding during the 'Dark Ages' and make comparisons to later cosmological eras that are observable.

However, CHIME has since proven itself to be ideally suited for studying FRBs, thanks to its wide field of view and the range of frequencies it covers (400 to 800 MHz). This is the purpose of the CHIME/ FRB Collaboration, which is to detect and characterize FRBs and trace them back to their sources.



As Dunlap Postdoctoral Fellow and lead author Ziggy Pleunis told Universe Today, each FRB is described by its position in the sky and a quantity known as its Dispersion Measure (DM). This refers to the time delay from high to low frequencies caused by the burst's interactions with material as it travels through space.

In a paper released in August 2021, the CHIME/FRB Collaboration presented the first large-sample catalogue of FRBs containing 536 events detected by CHIME between 2018 and 2019, including 62 bursts from 18 previously reported repeating sources.

For this latest study, Pleunis and his colleagues relied on a new clustering algorithm that looks for multiple events co-located in the sky with similar DMs.

"We can measure the fast radio burst's sky position and dispersion measure up to a certain precision that depends on the design of the telescope that's being used," said Pleunis.

"The clustering algorithm considers all fast radio bursts that the CHIME telescope has detected and looks for clusters of FRBs that have consistent sky positions and dispersion measures within the measurement uncertainties. We then do various checks to make sure the bursts in a cluster are really coming from the same source."

Of the over 1,000 FRBs detected to date, only 29 were identified as repeating in nature. What's more, virtually all repeating FRBs were found to be repeating in irregular ways. The only exception is FRB 180916, discovered by researchers at CHIME in 2018 which pulses every 16.35 days.

With the help of this new algorithm, the CHIME/FRB collaboration detected 25 new repeating sources, almost doubling the number available for study. In addition, the team noted some very interesting features that could provide insight into their causes and characteristics. As Pleunis added:

"When we carefully count all our fast radio bursts and the sources that repeat we find that only about 2.6 percent of all fast radio bursts that we discover repeat.

For many of the new sources we have detected only a few bursts, which makes the sources quite inactive. Almost as inactive as the sources that we have only seen once.

We thus cannot rule out that the sources for which we have so far only seen one burst, will eventually show repeat bursts as well. It is possible that all fast radio burst sources eventually repeat, but that many sources are not very active.

Any explanation for fast radio bursts should be able to explain why some sources are hyperactive while others are mostly quiet."

These findings could help inform future surveys, which will benefit from next-generation radio telescopes that will become operational in the coming years.

These include the Square Kilometre Array Observatory (SKAO), which is expected to gather its first light by 2027. Located in Australia, this 128-dish telescope will be merged with the MeerKAT array in South Africa to create the world's largest radio telescope.

In the meantime, the prodigious rate at which new FRBs are being detected (including repeating events) could mean that radio astronomers could be close to a breakthrough!

The Monster Book - A Review

The Monster Book - Creatures, Beasts and Fiends of Nature (Book Review)
Author: Nick Redfern
Publisher: Visible Ink
Price: $25.47 at Amazon
Reviewed by: Paul Dale Roberts, Halo Paranormal Investigations
Comments: Wow! This book is a MONSTER book! The book is thick and oozing with monster lore, identifying monsters seen throughout the world. Let me go over some of them.

There are witnesses throughout the British Isles that see ABCs! What are ABCs? ABC are Alien Big Cat(s). There are witnesses that see these large black cats roaming the hillsides of England. People have taken pictures of them.

The people of the British Isles seem to accept the sightings of ABCs, but it appears the government seems to avoid the subject. People have seen these big cats vanish right before their very eyes. Sometimes the big cats are seen near and around UFO activity. Just what are they?

It's anyone's guess. On some of these cryptids, you may want to keep a light on. Especially, when you read about the Linton Worm. The Linton Worm is a man-eating worm like beast, known to eat cows, sheep, pigs and yes...people! Nick did an excellent job with this book. The Monster Book covers hundreds of various cryptids. I will name just a few. In this book you will find information on the Beast of Bray Road; Fenrir the Werewolf; the Texas Chupacabra; Bear-Monster; Giant Salamander.

I have to comment on the giant salamander. Here in Elk Grove, California, we had giant salamander sightings at the Laguna Creek Wetlands. Come to find out two University of California Davis students released a giant salamander in our Wetlands. People who saw the giant salamander, thought they were seeing things, when actually they saw exactly what they thought they saw and there was a good explanation on why there was a giant salamander in our Wetlands.

Other monsters mentioned in this book are the Mongolian Death Worm.
The Mongolian Death Worm is one scary monster and most likely was the inspiration for Sandworms in the Dune novels by Frank Herbert and the sandworm in the movie Beetlejuice.

Monsters seem to leave a deep impression in the minds of man. More monsters mentioned in this book are....yes...release the Kraken! Yep, the story of the Kraken is in this monstrous book! Then you have the internet sensation Slenderman that basically has become a Tulpa and now people around the world encounter this cryptid!

The blood thirsty Wendigo is in this book. Skunk apes and the creepy grinning man. Remember how a grinning man named Indriid Cold tormented the author of the Mothman Prophesies? If I saw a creepy man grinning at me constantly, I would get pretty freaked out.

Nick really completed his homework on this book. So much information, so many monsters. I really enjoyed reading about the Tulpa. Dame Alexandrea David-Neel created her own Tulpa and there were some very scary results.
I have to mention that author Walter B. Gibson created his own Tulpa. A character he created called "The Shadow"....yeah, that Shadow! Walter thought about his character so much, that his family and friends who came to visit him, described seeing a character lurking around Walter's house that had a red scarf over his mouth, a long protruding nose and wearing a large-brimmed hat. Yes, his family and friends were seeing The Shadow! Walter created his own Tulpa!

Magnificent, brilliant and sometimes downright scary! The Monster Book has it all!!

UFO chase with 300 stunned witnesses!

According to the UK tabloid The Daily Star, radar footage of two fighter jets chasing around a dozen UFOs travelling in unison at 1,900mph is being studied by curious defence chiefs at the Unites States Air Force.

Reports the Daily Star writers, Jerry Lawton and Perkin Amalaraj online on 8th May 2023.

Radar footage of a chase between two fighter jets and a mile-wide fleet of 1,900mph UFOs is being studied by defence chiefs. Up to 300 locals reported witnessing the astonishing hot pursuit' of up to 12 mystery craft flying in unison in the skies over the US state of Texas 15 years ago.

But military top brass failed to acknowledge the incident took place or offer any explanation of what the F-16s were chasing. At first the US Air Force denied any of its jets were in the area at the time.

Then it conceded there had been an internal communications mistake and aircraft had been near the remote town of Stephenville when hundreds of locals reported the pursuit.

But military chiefs still refused to acknowledge the giant line of florescent orbs shooting away from the jets making movements beyond any manmade aircraft.

Former US deputy assistant secretary of defence for intelligence Christopher Mellon said the sighting was 'very intriguing' (Image: National Geographic/Grab)

UFO investigators used Freedom Of Information laws to obtain radar footage from the night of the sighting - January 8 2008. They found the UFOs appeared on radar pursued by the jets.

That footage is among 510 close encounters between military personnel and unidentified craft currently being probed by the All-domain Anomaly Resolution Office on behalf of the US Defence Department.

Its existence was revealed in National Geographic's bombshell new series UFOs: Investigating The Unknown screened on Monday (April 8) night.

Former US deputy assistant secretary of defence for intelligence Christopher Mellon told the show the sighting was "very intriguing".

Eyewitness Lee Roy Gaten, a police officer, said he looked out of his car and saw10 to 12 florescent orbs. "They were moving really quickly and then they stopped and then all of a sudden they shot off,'' he said. Seconds later he saw the F-16s race past.

Private airline pilot Steve Allen, (image on right) who was camping out with pals nearby, said he "noticed some lights coming at us at a very high rate of speed".

"We saw craft coming from the east going west. They had extremely large lights like a magnesium flare. It almost burnt your eyes to look at it,'' he said.

"It was moving extremely fast - faster than any normal aircraft.

"As we watched it we saw there were two F-16 jets in hot pursuit after it chasing it.

"It was unbelievable. It left us all in shock. It was out of this world.''

Pentagon Has Clear Image Of Triangle UFO

Rising Out Of Ocean, Elizondo Confirmed

The Pentagon reportedly holds a highly classified photograph of a "Black Triangle" UFO emerging from the ocean, taken by a US Navy pilot flying an F/A-18F Super Hornet. The photo's existence has not been officially confirmed by the Pentagon, but many people believe that it does exist, as they have been told by government insiders. It is thought to be one of the most compelling UFO sightings ever captured on camera and is considered to be highly classified because it was captured using military equipment onboard the fighter plane.

In 2020, during an interview on Coast to Coast AM radio with investigative journalist George Knapp, former AATIP head Luis Elizondo stated that the current UAP Task Force obtained images of multiple unknown aerial objects, including a clear image of a mysterious triangle emerging from the ocean, recorded by military pilots.

The object was described as a large triangle with "blunted" edges and spherical white "lights" on each corner, and the encounter is said to have occurred off the East Coast of the US. The pilots who encountered the object are believed to have been operating from either the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower or the USS John C. Stennis, both of which are Nimitz-class nuclear-powered supercarriers, which further deepens the apparent links between UFOs and man's nuclear capabilities.

Several officials confirmed the photo's existence, but they did not provide any further details. The report primarily focused on "Unidentified Submersible Phenomena" or unidentified "transmedium" vehicles that can operate both underwater and in the air. The UAP Task Force appears to be concerned that these objects may originate from within the world's oceans.

Tom Rogan, a national security writer for the Washington Examiner, verified the existence of the photo with his sources. He believes that the photo is "the tip of the iceberg" and that more UAP imagery and data would be leaked in the coming years. Rogan also called on the Pentagon to officially release more material.

In 2020, The Debrief reported that the Pentagon was investigating the "transmedium" element of the phenomena, which is the apparent ability of some UAPs to transit seamlessly between the air and the ocean.

The idea of "USOs," or "unidentified submersible objects," is not exclusive to the current UAP Task Force. In fact, there have been reports of unexplained, very high-speed sonar targets recorded by some of the most sophisticated listening equipment on the planet. A senior member of the intelligence community, whose responsibilities for decades involved underwater surveillance and reconnaissance programs, acknowledged that there are valid claims of extremely fast-moving underwater objects being detected by U.S. military systems.

The UAP Task Force is particularly interested in "transmedium vehicles," which may seem unusual, but there have been many accounts, some going back centuries, in which people observed unidentifiable craft operating in and out of the water. In public appearances, Marc D'Antonio, an astronomer and chief video/image analyst for the Mutual UFO Network (MUFON), shared an unusual experience involving the detection of an underwater "Fast Mover," which occurred while he was sailing as a civilian aboard one of the U.S. Navy's prized attack submarines.

Tyler Rogoway, a defense journalist, spoke with several veteran submariners who almost unanimously acknowledged that unexplained, very high-speed sonar targets are indeed recorded by some of the most sophisticated listening equipment on the planet. Although there is some scepticism about D'Antonio being granted a civilian ride-along, the Navy vets being interviewed confirmed the validity of such claims. The intelligence official declined to provide further details, citing the high levels of security classification associated with underwater reconnaissance.

Andy McGrillen from UAP Media UK, a team set up to campaign for a more open and serious discussion on UFOs in Britain, told The Sun Online that the triangular object was initially tracked underwater, then emerged, climbing to an altitude of 35-40,000 feet when an aircraft's onboard systems took a high-fidelity image. He thought that something like this would surely be highly classified given the nature of the equipment taking the picture. However, if it did make its way into the public domain, it could be a key piece of evidence, demonstrating that we are truly in the presence of some other intelligence.

Mystery Wire reported that UFO enthusiast Joe Murgia wrote on his Twitter that Knapp asked Elizondo about an alleged triangle UFO coming out of the water, to which Elizondo responded by saying he was confident the photo exists, and it might even be a still frame from a video. Elizondo and Knapp talked about the need for patience when talking about disclosure and the series of high-level briefings that Elizondo took part in. Elizondo praised Florida Senator Marco Rubio for his willingness to talk about UFOs publicly.

Knapp also asked if the UFO mystery can be solved by just looking at military encounters with UFOs or if we need to expand our horizons and look at other topics like poltergeists and Bigfoot that seem to be connected to close encounter cases. Elizondo said the government programs have limitations, such as an inability to speak with commercial pilots about sightings.

When asked if he would consider ever returning to the government to work on the new Unidentified Aerial Phenomena task force (UAPTF), Elizondo said he would have to clear it with his family first. If he did go back, he would try to run it differently than when he ran the AATIP at the Pentagon. Elizondo said he would push for more openness with the public and work to break down the barriers that stigma about UFOs can cause.

"The problem with it is that the government recognizes it. There are some very authentic UAP images. When people say, "Oh, they're all grainy and blurry," no, they're not. There are some that are really clear and are very authentic because we can look at the date and time stamp and the metadata on the video. We can then correlate that to any other type of assets that may be in the area, and we know where it turns out that we're picking something up that came across, let's say, the Pacific Ocean. All of a sudden, someone in San Diego says, "I had this really funny light doing these weird things in the backyard," and all of a sudden, you realize, "Oh, man, they got it on camera."

Yeah, there are some very, very compelling ones. There's one, in particular, I probably can't talk about it, but there's one of a triangle, and it's at night, and it's not just three points of light*. I mean, you can see the skin of the aircraft. You can see a lot, and to the point where some of our folks were like, "Well, should we take it off?" No, don't take it off the internet. Leave it up. That's not your video to take down. That's a private citizen's. Yes, they got a great video of a UAP. Congratulations. You should probably give them an award. Don't take the video down"—*Elizondo said during an interview with Calling All Beings.

Leaked emails from John Podesta, the chairman of Hillary Clinton's 2016 presidential campaign, may provide new insight into transmedium UFOs. The emails include a conversation between Podesta and a person named Bob Fish, who claims that the federal government has been collecting data on UFOs since the 1970s, using the Defense Support Program (DSP) satellites. (Click here to read the full article)

Fish shared an incident that happened to him in California, where a USAF official who worked on the program told Fish that there were times when they were diverted from these missions to track UFOs off the east coast of Florida. Fish stated that the UAP entered the atmosphere and descended into the Atlantic Ocean, specifically in an area east of Miami, Florida and north of Bermuda.

The US government has knowledge of some UAPs entering Earth's orbit from deep space and can actively track them via RF signals emanating from these crafts. The officials realized that if this god-like technology were to be obtained and mastered by their adversaries before the United States, it would make democracy vulnerable.

Additionally, for many years, Bob McGwier worked in clandestine intelligence. He disclosed two incidents about underwater UFOs or USOs, that he saw while performing covert operations. This claim was made several months after a video had been made public by the United States military, in which it appeared to show an unidentified flying object moving from the sky into the water in the year 2019.

Scientists 'surprised' by 'strange underwater structure' discovery in Europe

Story By Harriet Brewis

It's not quite the lost city of Atlantis, but scientists have just uncovered a slice of history that had been swallowed up by the sea.

Experts admitted that even they were surprised when divers unearthed a 7,000-year-old stone road that had lain buried under layers of sea mud.

The ancient structure was discovered after archaeologist Igor Borzić, of the University of Zadar, spotted "strange structures" nearly 16 ft (5m) underwater in the Bay of Gradina, off of the coast of Croatia.

The submerged road once linked the island of Korčula to an artificial, prehistoric settlement that belonged to a maritime culture known as the Hvar.

The university released footage of the incredible finding quite recently. It showed the passageway which consisted of stacked stones and measured some 12 ft (around 4m) across.

Archaeologists believe people walked this road "almost 7,000 years ago", with radiocarbon dating of wood near the site suggesting the settlement may have been built around 4,900 BC.

"In underwater archaeological research of the submerged neolithic site of Soline on the island of Korčula, archaeologists found remains that surprised them," the University of Zadar said in a Facebook statement.

"Namely, beneath the layers of sea mud, they discovered a road that connected the sunken prehistoric settlement of the Hvar culture with the coast of the island of Korčula."

Borzić and his team also discovered another "almost identical" settlement on the other side of Korčula Island.

Neolithic artefacts including a stone axe, cream blades and sacrificial fragments, were found at the site which lay at a depth of 4-5m.

Understandably, the researchers were delighted and, as they continue to delve into their nation's past, we wonder what else they'll unearth.

Ghostly floating white figure on UK beach leaves bystander 'absolutely stunned'

A woman was going for a walk when she happened to spot an unusual white figure on the British beach in the distance, which she believes could be otherworldly in nature.

By Lauren Davidson & Joe Smith

A woman has been left “absolutely stunned” after she spotted a ghostly white figure floating around while on a visit to the beach. The woman - who wishes to remain anonymous - was out walking when she spotted a white figure on the beach in the distance which she believes could be otherworldly in nature. The eerie encounter took place on Thursday evening (May 11) on Cleethorpes beach amidst heavy fog. Cleethorpes is a seaside resort on the Humber Estuary and the North Sea, south of Grimsby. The quick-thinking walker managed to snap two photos of the apparition before heading back to her car. She posted the snaps to see what others made of them.

She confirmed that she couldn’t make out if the ghostly image contained a person or “something else”. She told Grimsby Live: "I spotted this strange looking white figure floating round on the beach on Thursday evening. I was absolutely stunned so I quickly took a couple of photos and hopped into my car. The gloomy and foggy nature of the evening just made it look and seem even stranger." She urged people In the area to "look out", adding: "I'm not sure if it's a person or something else." Whether or not the figure was a result of the thick fog or something more sinister, it isn't the first time people have reported ghostly goings-on in Cleethorpes.

According to paranormal sightings reported on PsychicWorld.com, several people have spotted a phantom old man who haunts the site of the Wonderland fun park. Some people would report hearing their name being called, but if they saw the ghost, it would disappear when spotted. Local legend claims the non-threatening spirit is that of a worker who lost his life on the ghost train, and has haunted the site ever since.

There are also ghostly tales about the former Imperial Hotel. The 115-year-old Victorian coach house structure which straddled the corner of Blundell Avenue and Grimsby Road in Cleethorpes has a Dutch gable and legend persists, the former hotel is haunted by the ghost of a Victorian maid.

The story claims a young woman became pregnant and was locked away upstairs to avoid shaming her family. Ghost hunters also claim to have found the spirits of a missing fisherman and a sobbing pregnant woman in the old hotel. Through the years, publicans and their regulars have reported ghostly goings-on with objects having been mysteriously moved and electrical equipment flicked on and off, and some claim to have felt strange sensations surrounding them. The building has since been turned into flats.

And back at the beach end of the resort, although The Coliseum on Cleethorpes High Street has changed its name and uses over the years, rumours persist that when it was known as the Baton Rouge, it was also plagued by unexplained incidents, convincing management the place was haunted.

Doors slammed at night, bottles fell off shelves, lights were switched on – and rumours abounded of a ghostly lady who floated up and down.

Military chiefs plan to fight aliens with nukes and lasers in 'extraterrestrial' war

Army chiefs may be at war with beings from beyond the stars in a matter of 'two or three decades' according to a top expert believing new weapons are needed to fight extra-terrestrials.

By Andy Crick & Ewan Gleadow

Army chiefs were urged to fight aliens with nukes, according to a secret document. UFO hunters have got their hands on a once secret report called 'Extra-Terrestrial Warfare' by the Combat Operations Research Group. It sets out how the US Army would need to prepare for war with Martians. But they would have to develop new weapons, vehicles and moon bases to take on hostile ETs. The opening page states: "The United States may be called upon to wage extra-terrestrial warfare within the next two to three decades.

"This paper explores the implications of this requirement for the US Army and proposes a program of studies that will enable the Army to meet this requirement."

The 20-page document first appeared on eBay and had no information other than the title and a price tag of £800,000 ($1million). But it has now been declassified and released to researcher John Greenwald, who runs the Black Vault website, under terms of the Freedom of Information Act.

Any future war with aliens would occur in space, on Mars, moons and asteroids in our solar system, according to Robert C Suggs, who wrote the report. The secret paper states military bases could be set up on "natural satellites" starting with our Moon to carry out exploration and surveillance. And new weaponry such as lasers would be used to combat the alien threat. The report said: "Direct energy weapons such as lasers seem to offer outstanding possibilities for space weaponry but much further research is required to increase the power of these devices and reduce the size of the components to manageable proportions for warfare." Other firepower would be considered including using rockets and nuclear missiles.

"Nuclear weapons are generally agreed to have good potential for space application yet their employment may be restrained by a number of factors such as the effect of nuclear radiation on communication and sensing devices," the report adds. It also called for special space suits to be developed to protect against radiation during a potential alien conflict. The document was drawn up in June 1965 – four years before Neil Armstrong stepped foot on the Moon. It calls for a number of "substantive projects" to be launched to "develop the organisation, equipment and doctrine that will be ultimately required in the 1970-1980 time period".

Philip Mantle, 63, a former director of investigations for the British UFO Research Association, said: "We have been open to alien invasion stories in print and on film since who knows when so it cannot surprise anyone that the US authorities put these ideas in writing if nothing else. "Added to this we know that our fragile planet has in the past been hit by large comets and meteorites so maybe this was in their planning as well, saving us from a destructive asteroid.

"The last time such an incident happened was of course in Tunguska, Russia, in 1908. "If such a thing happened today over a built-up area, then the casualty list could well be in the millions. Perhaps it's not such a bad idea to have such a space weapons system after all?"

Several recent UFO sightings reported by pilots over the Pacific Ocean

Numerous sightings of unidentified flying objects have been reported by dozens of pilots flying across the Pacific Ocean over the last two months, according to a UFO researcher.

Ben Hansen, a former FBI agent and the host of Discovery+ show "UFO Witness," obtained new footage and air traffic control recordings that reveal baffled pilots struggling to describe their bizarre mid-air sightings.

He compiled accounts of pilots from Southwest Airlines, Hawaiian Airlines and others between Aug. 6 and Sept. 23, 2022. In one captivating account, a former military pilot reported seeing multiple aircraft flying above him.

"We've got a few aircraft to our north here and he's going around in circles, much higher altitude than us. Any idea what they are?" pilot Mark Hulsey radioed in on Aug. 18 while flying a charter jet off the Los Angeles coast.

The confused controller responds, telling the pilot that he was not sure.

Hulsey called back 23 minutes later to say that the three aircraft he had originally reported had increased to seven, flying between 5,000 and 10,000 feet above him.

"They just keep going in circles. I was an F-18 pilot in the Marine Corps, and I'm telling you, I've done many intercepts, I've never seen anything like this," Hulsey says in the recording.

According to Hansen, the strange lights that some pilots reported as possible aircraft were "seen by upwards of 15 different commercial flights. And at least six pilots are willing to go on record with their names and everything if asked to do so by any investigative agencies," he said.

"In this case, we have a global phenomenon from as far west as Japan, to as far east as possibly Miami. Whatever it is, pilots are seeing it from halfway across the world."

Currently, Hansen said, there is no official protocol for reporting strange sightings for civilian pilots "because they don't think the FAA will follow up, or worse, they will be ridiculed."

An FAA spokesperson told the Daily Mail that it documents strange sightings "whenever a pilot reports one to an air traffic control facility.

"If the pilot report can be corroborated with supporting information such as radar data, it is shared with the UAP Task Force."

Veteran pilot Chris Van Voorhis told the Daily Mail he also saw three to five bright objects flying in a circular motion like a "race track" for hours while flying over the Pacific Ocean from Honolulu to Los Angeles in August.

The 63-year-old, who's racked up over 32,000 hours of flight experience, said the objects he saw appeared to be within Earth's orbit but could have been out in space.

Other airlines radioed in to Van Voorhis to ask him if he was seeing the same objects he was.

"It had to be in a very, very high orbit, or actually even out in space quite a ways away from anything that a satellite would be, because every time we were seeing it, it was in the lower right-hand corner of the Big Dipper, no matter where we were in the world," he told the outlet.

"It lasted for such a long time that it actually became boring, almost."

He said it could not have been a satellite, such as Elon Musk's Star link system, because they were moving in different directions instead of the same direction.

Van Voorhis' employer, whose name was withheld, forbade him from speaking about the incident.

He told the Daily Mail about half of his pilot friends "have seen some type of an anomaly" in the sky.

Van Voorhis also claims to have seen three flying discs from his cockpit in 2004 while flying from Japan to Honolulu for Japan Airways. The discs appeared to form a triangle formation before disappearing.

"It wasn't like they accelerated. They were just at speed and gone over the horizon. The whole thing took about 15 seconds," he told the Daily Mail.

"The aircraft in front of us saw it too. They said, 'Are you going to tell anybody?' and we said, 'No.'"

Recently, the US Department of Defense launched a new outfit tasked with finding and identifying UFOs in restricted airspace after Washington officials admitted they could not explain the phenomena of UFO sightings.

The Airborne Object Identification and Management Synchronization Group was announced after the intelligence community verified a series of unexplained aerial phenomena sightings by the military earlier this year, but said it could not identify the mysterious vehicles, in a report to Congress detailing the government's knowledge of UFOs.

It succeeded the Navy's Unidentified Aerial Phenomena Task Force, an arm of the military started in 2020 to "improve its understanding of, and gain insight into" UFOs.

Last July, the House of Representatives unanimously approved an amendment to the National Defense Authorization Act making it easier to report unidentified flying objects or UFOs.

OLM SUBSCRIPTION CHANGES & Back Issues

SAVE UPTO £7 WITH ONE OF OUR NEW SUBSCRIPTIONS OFFERS

FROM INDIVIDUAL MAGAZINES, OR UP TO THREE YEAR SUBSCRIPTIONS

At OLM, we have long been known for our fair subscription price and offering substantial value for money, with 6 bimonthly issues a year sent directly to your own inbox, priced at £11.50 including a Stripe payment fee.

The subscription fee income goes toward funding the annual OLM conference, so by subscribing you are directly helping to keep the event going and growing.

Each copy of OLM contains 90+ pages per issue featuring informed and interesting articles from many noted British and globally famous authors and investigators. Names that are familiar to you our readers, for their commitment to discovering the truth and sharing this information with you. Paul Sinclair, Philip Kinsella, Philip Mantle, Ronald Kinsella, Malcolm Robinson, Peter Robbins, John Greenewald, Preston Dennet, Dr. Irena Scott PhD, Dan D. Farcas PhD, Dr. David Clarke PhD, Denver Michaels, Ashley Cowie FSA Scot, Alyson Dunlop.

We endeavour to also encourage new writers and investigators to send in items to share and many have become contributors and feature on a regular basis in OLM.

Our fantastic new subscription offers means the longer that you subscribe the less you pay for OLM and better still the Stripe Fee is reduced to one payment only. We are also for the first time allowing you to purchase individual copies of each new publication, without a yearly subscription. But to really save you can now also subscribe for either 1, 2 or 3 years.

Individual copies of OLM if you do not wish to subscribe are now priced at £3.90p including Stripe fee.

The original 1-year subscription price remains at £11.50p including fee.

The new 2-year subscription will be £19.50p including Stripe fee.

Finally, the new 3-year subscription will be £27.50p including Stripe fee. Making the 3-year subscription the best value, saving you £7 over a similar single subscription that you renew yearly, to cover the same time period.

As a VERY SPECIAL OFFER TO PREVIOUS SUBSCRIBERS who return to OLM after not renewing and missing 3 or more issues you can purchase the renewal subscription for 1 year (ONLY) for a set £10 including fees.

AND REMEMBER YOUR CONFERENCE TICKET DISCOUNT PRICES TOO.

Another similar online publication is now charging NEW SUBSCRIBERS up to £13, £24, and finally £33 for similar set periods, with no ability to purchase single issues.

ALSO, if you already have previously subscribed to that publication you are, it appears, not allowed to renew at these prices but instead pay £14, £27, and £36, respectively.

DO remember that OLM back issues are available to purchase on disk as PDF sets. Sold as a package of 6 PDF issues of 5 seasons, magazines 1 to 35.

Season 1, (Issues 1 to 6) = £13.00

Season 2, (Issues 7 to 12) = £13.00

Season 3, (Issues 13 to 18) = £14.00

Season 4, (Issues 19 to 24) = £14.00

Season 5, (Issues 25 to 30) = £15.00

Season 6, (Issues 31 to 36) = £15.00

Season 7, (Issues 37 to 42) = £15.00

There would also be a £1.50 postal/Stripe cost. Also available is the full set of back issues, issues 1 to 42 (Season's 1 to 7) at a standalone price of £60 (a large saving over individual yearly purchases sets.)

The Public Deceived: The Grand UFO Deception'

is a book which examines both old and new UFO cases, drawing upon the emphasis that no matter what evidence is presented to the public regarding this reality, we are still no nearer in truly understanding what we are up against.

The cover-up is due to lies and disinformation from the 'powers-that-be' who are determined to quash any suggestion that we are being visited by so-called extra-terrestrials. This has also been orchestrated by a carefully imposed program of mental manipulation via media outlets.

The Gods of Eden

an ET Hypothesis & the Suppression of Truth'

By Philip Kinsella

Our Genesis is something of a mystery. While there are two schools of thought surrounding the evolution of our species, we are still met with a barrage of contradicting data which does little in the way in us categorically knowing for sure how it all happened. Religion within its restricted approach believes that a supreme being called God was responsible surrounding the formation of Man via supernatural means, while science vehemently denies any wonderment or mystery, and considers that all nature, along with the 'Human' and universe is attributed to a mere, cosmic accident. While religious ideology promotes order, science sticks to the official narrative encompassing the chaos theory. It seems that it would take nothing less than organisation, as opposed to disorder, to bring about the subsequent emergence of not only the hominid, but all life within its spectacular glory, as well as the mysterious universe in which we dwell.

Much of our history, (although steeped in so-called myth and legend) may direct us to a more coherent picture of Man's overall creation, along with a warring faction of Gods not from this world. After all, there's no smoke without fire, and much of our history has been buried so deep, only a simplified version is recounted as the official narrative within both academia and religious ideology. Although most of the scientific establishments will outwardly reject the hypothesis that we could possibly be a by-product of engineering via extraterrestrial intelligence, along with the sacred sectors, this idea might not appear as farfetched as first considered. And in at least speculating just such a hypothesis may connect some of the dots regarding a species known as the 'Greys' which appear prevalent within the UFO community of today, and not some 250,000 years ago when the cradle of civilisation was thought to have developed by an altogether different pantheon of so-called Gods; at least from the viewpoint of eminent scholar, researcher and author, Zacharia Sitchin within his chronicles surrounding a race of beings known as the Anunnaki.

Throughout history, numerous models of the hominid have been discovered, varying in height and cranium size, and science continually promotes the idea that we had evolved from our cousin, the ape, as the Darwin school-of-thought endorses. Yet, how can this explain the radical remodification in intelligence within the Human which suddenly sprang onto the scene circa 4000 B.C and 3000 B.C? Surely, nature would have seen to the extinction of our former cousin, and whichever primate we had allegedly progressed from! Current data categorically shows that there is no proof that we are a descendant from apes, but it could be theorised that a primate's DNA was used and combined with that of an extra-terrestrial's to create the hybrid of Man – or better known as Adam. The sudden rise of Homo Sapiens appears totally at odds within our evolutionary model, leading us to suspect that our present-day species sprang onto the stage of life literally overnight.

Within religious scriptures, Heaven and Earth are referenced continuously, and the overall theme indicates warring factions between Angels, Demons, a vengeful God, along with talking animals, miracles, and so forth. Many within the sacred sectors consider that any recurrence of such dramas referenced within the Bible cannot be repeated in modern times. However, such supernatural incidences, along with the sighting of UFOs are still as prevalent in our world today as they had been back then, although we are more inclined to consider such phenomena with a more intellectual viewpoint in ascertaining just what such singularities are and where they originate from, and not something accepted as mere miracles or the work of the Devil.

Although supernatural occurrences are labelled in departments such as the 'Occult' or 'Ufology,' we know enough to assume that such phenomenon is not as ethereal as we have been led to believe, and something which science is happy to promote because these forces cannot be measured or tested in a laboratory. Yet, the facts as they remain indicates flaws within the genus of Man through the two simplified versions promoted via varied establishments of so-called knowledge. The origins of the Bible have been subtly changed over the epochs to enforce a more rigid doctrine, promoting fear and mental subjugation and, perhaps, a complete turnaround to deliberately cast aside any suggestion that ETs may have developed the Human, and, thus, allowing such strict models of belief to be enforced which gives little in the way of mental advancement on our part.

Science, on the other hand, continually denounces such ideas when discovered by researchers, and are happy to ridicule or destroy the character and work of those persons who dare step over that line where the judiciously composed blueprint which promotes only the authorised account is concerned. Of course, we can see this in all aspects of our world, ranging from free energy, holistic treatments, to name but a few areas which the System we serve has vehemently overruled in its quest for profit and control over the betterment of our species. Those nameless, faceless bureaucrats who hide within the shadows are, themselves, guiding us all into a spiritual cul-de-sac, and one which will eventually destroy the very foundation of reason; and an area which I firmly believe is their goal. The truth, so they say, is far more revealing than the foolish and sanitised version we have been led to believe, and blatantly contradicts the entire narrative the System continually administers.

In more recent times, the secret UFO department of study from those establishments which remain hidden outside the community's awareness reveals just how this System we serve can deceive us. Their most powerful control mechanism, (the media) persistently promotes a false narrative where the UFO reality is concerned on every outlet at their disposal. Yet, the admittance recently from the Pentagon that, perhaps they had been wrong all along, and that UFOs may be an area regarding further study was met with incredulous shock from researchers within the UFO community. The establishments of power had revealed a truth, it would seem, and something researchers had been aware of for decades.

We mustn't forget, either, that the Pentagon had even admitted to analysing material from certain downed saucers, and most notably the Roswell UFO incident which rocked the world back in 1947. The acknowledgement of the UFO, (now UAP, Unidentified Aerial Phenomena) at the behest of the military confirmed the authenticity of several videos and images, most notably the Navy's famous 'Tic Tac' UFO encounter in mid-November 2004 witnessed by pilots and the crew onboard the Nimitz Carrier Strike Group. The confirmation that such anomalous activity has been something of great interest to the military core behind closed doors and away from public scrutiny for decades was now 'out of the bag,' so-to-speak. This was nothing new, contrary to what the establishments of power led the world to believe; that there had been no previous and serious investigations into the UFO situation, other than a few departments which had been dubious in nature, and certainly something which did not bode well with researchers back then. The only reason why the Pentagon was forced to investigate was simply because of the military filming encounters with UFOs, and which subsequently started to make the rounds on social media, and by no less than those men and women who'd been at the heart of such activity. The question of Air Defence being compromised was paramount within National Security.

Time and again, UFO investigations from such organisations as 'Project Grudge,' 'Project Sign,' and 'Project Blue Book,' to name but a few, had been designed by the Air Force, (due to public pressure) to examine and thereby ultimately debunk the UFO problem on a major scale. People would naturally believe those they look up to in positions of power to tell them the truth, right? We are aware that as far back as the famous Roswell, New Mexico UFO crashed disk, complete with alien bodies recovered by members of the Roswell army had been an area of great contention for the military and, indeed, US government when the admittance that the army had in their possession a 'Flying Disk.' The sudden retraction within the press, (and in no less than twenty-four hours) led to a furore of wild speculations.

How could the army mistake a UFO for a secret Mogul weather balloon, (and something which then became the official narrative) one wonders? Those within any military core are, so we understand, professionally trained men. God help us if they could not identify a mere weather balloon for that of an actual, structured craft! Crashed weather balloons had been a regular occurrence back in the day, and something of a common occurrence. Their retrieval by farmers to the establishments would afford them a small reward for its recovery, so both sides could clearly identify what they had in their possession. The Roswell UFO had clearly been something very different, and it was this which prompted a major cover-up of international proportions.

Image: Marduk was the Babylonian King of the Gods who presided over justice, compassion, healing, regeneration, magic, and fairness.

Witnesses were told to keep quiet, and if not, then had been threatened with their lives. And if this had all been nothing less than a secret, experimental balloon, the army didn't even know it existed until the debris had been discovered by sheep rancher, Mack Brazel. There have been other renowned cases of UFO crashes from across the world, but you'll find that a well-orchestrated military clean-up operation sees to the removal of any hard evidence.

You will also find that the famous 'Wikipedia's' explanation surrounding just about any subject on the paranormal/UFO topic will have you believe it's all explainable. Yes, they've got it all worked out for you! However, this deception which lies at the heart of an even greater and secret establishment of power which is nigh impossible to track is alarming within its symmetry. The big question is 'why' the public are led astray in the first instance regarding such blatant facts which clearly contradicts the official narrative?

Truth can be dangerous, especially to an already programmed public. The System we serve now utilises psychological tactics in a silent war. Bullets and road accidents are no longer needed. The word 'Conspiracy Theory' had been allegedly engineered by no less than the CIA in 1967, and when much of the public did not buy into the events surrounding the shooting in Dallas, USA of President J. F. Kennedy in 1963; or, at least, the official version which was portrayed until people started asking the right questions which the System didn't like. Not everything in the world is a conspiracy, yet people are suspicious of certain key events which occur, and something they are eager to explore if they smell a rat! However, the System will use every means at its disposal in creating no transparency, ostensibly muddying the waters in a deliberate attempt to pull the wool over our eyes. Conspiracy is an essential tool for those powers-that-be to throw us off the trail if a scent is detected and further explored.

What if our genesis as a species is all wrong; that we are, in fact, a combination of the hominid and alien, and that the continuation of the UFO problem today are clear indications of this fact, no matter how the System tries to twist our arms?

The Creation of Man

I have always believed that as humans, we are the result of some hybridisation program going back into the very beginning of our creation, but from beings very similar in form to us and very different from the famous Greys which dominate the UFO scene in terms of contact on multiple levels of reality, although our creators had also been reptilian in nature. After all, did not God, (or correctly, the Gods) fashion us in their image and in their likeness? Sumerian clay cuneiforms inform us of such Gods which we now consider as extra-terrestrials in shiny vessels approaching the Earth, and that the primitive hominid had been infused with alien DNA, thus creating Man as a slave-species. Invariably, the model of the human had gone through varied mutations, until the so-called Gods were pleased with their work. As humans, we are part earth, (dust) and part alien, (universe). This indicates why we cannot exist beyond the confines of our planet for any length of time, because as an infusion of the mammal which had been modified by certain extra-terrestrials, our physicality denies us this right in the long term. Although we are a product from the stars, our corporeal development is very much linked to terra firma.

This, I believe, is where the base of genetic operations occurred to bring about the model of Man. But we are soul, and which is also a combination of the conscious universe, whereby such cognizance can remove itself from this world and into the next upon death, or in temporary cases of remote viewing, astral projection, and so-forth where our awareness of self can explore alternate dimensions of reality, but which is still connected like an ever-present stream through to our brain, and thereby locking us into this province. Ancient Sumerian texts clearly stipulate that we were fashioned by intelligent beings known as the Anunnaki, and of which themselves occasionally fought with one another.

The book of Genesis, along with the Hebrew Bible appear to be condensed versions of the Sumerian writings, giving the public a sanitised, yet brutal contradiction to the actual events which have been hidden from the public and used to invoke fear and control among the masses. Although the subject matter is far too complex to address here, it is enough for us to consider the enormous ramifications that, perhaps, there was no one true God in this sense, (as a powerful and mighty, ethereal entity) but scientists far ahead of us within their current technological achievements. This in no way denounces the fact that God does not exist, and something which I believe we are all a part of in terms of a united consciousness, including extra-terrestrials. Within the creation mythos, we know that Adam and Eve had been brought onto the scene, and it is my belief, (among many others) that such beings represented the perfect model after so many attempts by the Anunnaki in creating a new earth-based genus.

As humans, we had been genetically engineered and used as slaves for the Gods of old. It would make sense for an alien species who founded a temporary headquarters on Earth to experiment in bringing life to this world. If we had colonised an alien planet, and we had been few and far between, then I am certain we ourselves would consider just such an option. The Anunnaki needed help, and this may explain how such a feat was achieved via genetic manipulation and allowing the hominid to develop, but not as advanced as our creators it would seem.

As humans, we are brilliant, yet flawed in terms of longevity. We do not live for very long and are ill-equipped to survive in the Earth's harsh environment without clothes which protect us from ever-changing climate conditions. Considering that, if we had been the product of natural selection as promoted by Darwin's theory of evolution, then it is unlikely that we would have adapted so unprepared. After all, do we not shy from our very own sun? As humans, we differ from every other creature, insect, and mammal on this planet. We have been allowed to advance in all areas of science, technology, agriculture, the arts, cosmology, and so on, (and knowledge which I believe had been handed down to us from our Overlords). I seriously doubt that we are the result of an accident, or a man with a beard whipping us up in no less than six days! It seems incredible that such blatant contradictions which have been initiated by higher echelons throughout the ages to conceal the truth is still held as fact. I feel it more acceptable to consider that best-selling author of the 'Anunnaki Chronicles', Zacharia Sitchin, along with many other esteemed researchers who have been shunned within the scientific establishments, and who are near to the truth concerning Man's origins. Why, one wonders, was such knowledge hidden from us?

The answer may indicate that when the Human had developed sufficiently and rebelled against their Gods who left our world, certain leaders used status and control for their own means, ostensibly re-writing history to create servitude among the masses, just like our creators from the stars. In retrospect, we are in 'their' image and likeness, and they had been flawed through their own battles and need for control.

It is believed that the Anunnaki had arrived from a planet called Nibiru, which means 'Planet of the Crossing'; the Babylonian name for Nibiru was Marduk, and one which eclipses our solar system every 3,600 years on an elliptical orbit. Although many Cosmologists refute claims that Marduk exists, it was known nonetheless as 'The Twelfth Planet,' which is illustrated in the Sumerian pictograms, along with the history surrounding the 'Cradle of Life.' It was here where the Anunnaki established Eden, along with the model of Man as we see Him today, combining their own DNA with those of the ape to mould a slave-species which would work on their behalf, but one which could not reproduce.

Gold was a valuable commodity to their world, and this is one of the reasons they needed a workforce to mine the Earth. They shared their knowledge in all areas and came to respect their creation in every sense of the word, until a rebellion occurred. These hybrids took the weight of huge workloads off the Overlords while magnificent cities flourished. However, a disagreement between Enki and Enlil, (two of the chief Overlords who saw to the development of our species) was brought about through the drastic alterations surrounding their creation, the Human, and whereby their new genus could now reproduce – an area of great contention for the Anunnaki leaders, who themselves wanted to see an end to their creation. This came about by a cataclysm brought on by Nibiru's gravitational field affecting the Earth, and thus brought about the famous deluge through a huge shift within vast regions of our world's landmass. Noah is thought to have been the only survivor but had been helped by one of the extra-terrestrials in creating an Ark capable of withstanding the destruction and harbouring all known species, so that they may start over. I would imagine this was some type of gene bank, and not a vessel to carry physical creatures/animals onboard.

Image: In Gods image or is the image of God Alien in Nature?

It is thought that the Gods had returned when Man began to flourish again, and in the time of Noah, if only to re-establish their governance until they left for good, and a lot of this information has been altered to fit the 'Official Narrative' within the Biblical works to cushion such revelations. There is a theory that the Anunnaki will once again return when the planet of Nibiru's elliptical orbit arrives back in our solar system. This is what the churches and System we serve has feared and would create huge damage to the infrastructure of our species if this truth was ever revealed. Humanity would see that they'd been conned, big time!

The false doctrines would then collapse. The Anunnaki had made certain that, unlike them, we were not as well made. Did they foresee a time when the Human would advance within areas of genetic engineering themselves and alter what they had initially created? And what if they returned? What would become of us then?

It is clear to see within our make-up that we harbour incredible energy, and something the System has also tried to suppress. The auric energy-field which permeates beyond the flesh indicates that our consciousness can exist beyond both time and space. I believe this energy-grid serves as both memory and our connection to alternate dimensions of reality, the real life-force which is part of all that is within the universe and beyond. While attached to its physical counterpart, the aura serves also as a record of all which has been experienced, not only in multiple lives during the process of reincarnation, but also what is termed life on the Other Side. After all, it is theorised that our creators allowed us as humans to reproduce. If the Anunnaki had created Man on Earth, what's to say they didn't in other parts of the universe? Is it possible that the Greys, (and which are entirely different from our system of reality) had themselves been a by-product of the Anunnaki in the past, but that such beings had been designed to not procreate with one another, much like their intentions had been with Man?

Such actions may bring about some form of spiritual stagnation, and one which will not, (so theorised) be looped back into the wheel of creation itself. When the physical Grey dies, its spark of awareness may not be strong enough to allow it entry into alternate worlds, because it has not been brought through the correct channel of reproduction. Is it possible that such Greys, (now in a state of perpetual damnation, and something not attributed by themselves) have found our light through memory and DNA from their previous 'Makers,' discovering that the Human had also been a descendant to the Anunnaki, but one which was given the spiritual birth-right to evolve beyond death. Perhaps this is one of the reasons why the System cannot tell the public of this reality, because they have no power or control over such so-called alien forces, or that they are in collusion with them!

Many consider the Greys as Demons, or Fallen Angels, but we might be wrong within this assumption. Of course, there are such entities, but I do not feel they are behind the larger aspects of Ufology. Our right as the Human has always been to question and evolve, and have we not ourselves considered the bigger question regarding life after death? Our journey is not limited to one single incarnation as many believe. Within NDE, (Near-death Experience) research, there is evidence to suggest that we connect to a paradise, perhaps Eden itself once the body perishes and returns to the ground from whence it came. As in the nature of our Gods who, themselves, were mighty, strong, warring but also compassionate, creative and, above all loving, we follow within their traits.

During an alien abduction within our modern times, the Greys, (which I believe had been a much earlier creation of the Anunnaki and from an entirely different system than that of Earth's) have instant access to an abductee's mind and can thereby scramble their reality. This is how the Greys hide themselves within the depths of awareness, using the human psyche as the entry point to their arrival, rather like a Star Gate, albeit a psychic one.

Their base of operations is secret, unlike the Anunnaki who did not fear to mingle with the Human and worshipped as Gods, until things became unstable. They are master magicians and can create illusions onboard their so-called UFOs which are also a projection within their consciousness and a point of reference they use in our space and time, rather like a half-way house. It is here when they can proceed with human 'soul extraction' and whereby the energies between extraterrestrial and the abductee are matched. During this point, full interaction is then possible. This is not always the case with other beings which grace the cosmos, but certainly with a nefarious group of rogue Greys.

The churches in the past have promoted the concept that anything extra-terrestrial in nature is pure evil but isn't it strange that considering new developments whereby the Pentagon has indicated there may be a possibility in the ET hypothesis, Pope Benedict XVI had decreed that he would be more than happy to baptise an alien! This sudden turn-about may have something to do with evidence now coming to light proposing that such beings do exist, and that 'faith' and 'control' wavers when verification is presented. What would the churches say if Jesus turned out to be an ancient astronaut? How quickly the religious books will change!

There, of course, will be those set within their rigid mindsets and still see such beings as ungodly, but only when contact has been fully initiated will further understanding move us away from darkness and into the light of day. As stated, not all extra-terrestrials are evil, and I am only addressing a minority within the ever-increasing knowledge that many more alien species exist and have been visiting Earth since time immemorial. Could such beings be evil in nature? Time will tell, but until we as a genus evolve past the barbaric way we treat the world, as well as ourselves, then such intelligences will view us rather like kids in the backyard, arguing with one another while playing with matches.

I am in no doubt that, (and seeing as certain Greys operate within higher/lower dimensions of reality) that individuals here on Earth, (most notably Satanists) have summoned these spectres to aid their own agenda. As humans, we have the physical and non-physical elements which are temporarily affixed within this experience on Earth. I think the difficulty within Ufology are the varied traits the phenomenon presents itself to us. However, and as we are aware, consciousness exists beyond the material realm, and might well mould into other forms, and very different from the hypothesised model of Heaven which we understand as the only other realm available to us upon death.

Deception

The Illuminati are one such group who share hidden knowledge in controlling mental subjugation to the masses, hiding like the magician in the film 'The Wizard of Oz' behind a curtain, until the curtain is drawn back, revealing such characters to be weak when confronted. This world we live in has always had a cloud of doom and gloom over the horizon, and no real progress has been initiated for our species to develop beyond the still stagnant levels of mental enlightenment.

New technology which is free and beneficial to our Earth system is immediately seized if it cannot draw in huge profits to those masters at the top of the pyramid of control. I fear that the way things are going, the System we serve is wanting individuality to be removed. The introduction of AI is designed so that our masters will be able to look through you like a pane of glass. There will be no privacy, no thoughts which may help rather than hinder our race. In fact, the new state of totalitarian governance will see us all being nothing less than obedient servants which is not able to think, but merely obey.

This is startling within its symmetry, in the sense that our rights are slowly being stripped bit by bit. Perhaps such human echelons in power are, themselves, in alliance with these Greys who have promised them riches and power beyond measure to further their own agenda, and that we at the lower end of the social spectrum will be mere fodder for such a nightmarish future. Summoning spirits, as in the case of famous demonologist, Aleister Crowley, (and many others before and after him) is dangerous grounds, and something I accept as foolhardy. There have been countless occasions whereby individuals have beckoned such entities from the ether with very negative intentions, only to find their lives and, (in most cases) their minds corrupted.

When we open doorways to the mind, we must step cautiously indeed, for there are other forces ready to march inside and take over. However, that said, it is essential that, as researchers, we look at both sides of the coin. Religious people condemn those who research the darker realms, but how else are we to fathom good from evil if we are not able to study both areas? All we are doing is creating an understanding of what may be at work here. Without exploration and knowledge, we are completely defenceless to forces which seemingly operate beyond our five senses, and of which we perceive as the only reality. This, within itself is a fallacy. Our existence here on Earth is but a mere step to a larger awareness of multiple truths.

There is evidently intent from such Greys who operate under the cover of darkness and seek abductees to further their own agenda. For decades, the System has always denounced such activity, when all along they have known the truth to such alien intrusions.

They have systematically lied to us. The news media which works in tandem to their masters promote the biggest lies this world has ever seen, pushing a false narrative into the minds of millions to steer consciousness into a more obedient level of acceptance. Trouble is looming, because sooner or later, such extra-terrestrial intelligences will indeed reveal themselves to us in one way or another, and a radical shift within the way we view life and the universe, as well as ourselves will come into immediate effect. That is why I believe educating the public to such phenomenon is essential. This so-called drip-feeding of UFO disclosure does little in the long run in achieving an understanding that we are not the only inhabitants to grace this, or any other universe.

The trouble is, I feel a lot of folks will be truly horrified that our System has no control over the phenomenon which can invade our skies at a moment's notice. This is alarming, but I guess such entities have no cares as to the way we maintain restricted airspace from one state to another. Other seemingly unconnected occurrences, (most notably the cattle mutilations) is a phenomenon which those in power have crushed, so the truth will never come out, and that's without acknowledging the human mutilations which must not be spoken of.

Is the System we serve protecting the public from such horrors, and applying disinformation as a way of pulling the wool over our eyes? Or are they themselves in collusion with a certain faction of aliens, working together in a grand plan to subjugate the lower classes, and none other than an ancient force which saw to our arrival on this planet?

The public have been programmed on a very basic level, hoodwinked into the belief that if something cannot be physically touched in terms of the paranormal, then it isn't real. And although the UFO/alien phenomenon is not going away any time soon, drastic new measures must be brought into the fray in seeing this perplexing singularity in a new light. Revealing research indicates that such beings, along with their crafts, have more clout as to the way they infiltrate time, space, along with human perception. There are also indications of there being more than one race of extra-terrestrials as well, and that many of them are here on Earth already. This I have never doubted. But the big question is, where exactly are they? Although debates have raged as to such entities operating outside our time/space continuum, the facts are clear in the sense that they wish to have no dealings with humanity on a united front.

What might this tell us about such actions? That the Human is not to be trusted. For the large part, people are deceitful and lie, are corrupt, angry, vengeful and appear to have absolutely no respect for their planet or fellow men. This, toppled with the fact that we are governed by a System which also lies and has secreted evidence that we are from the stars and had evolved through the amalgamation of alien DNA is surely the icing on the cake. To my mind, the System can carry on with their deception until the day UFOs are above every continent and within every city across the world. Then, and only then, will those establishments of power be forced to release what they know to the public. Until that time, it appears we must wait and see what next excuse truth seekers will be told from those who maintain such secrets. Although many consider the UFO situation to be an impossible science, I truly believe that it is 'we' who must change within our own, negative attitudes before any progress can be made, and contact established. This may be part of the reason aliens do not go directly to the leaders of our world, but those of us on the lower spectrum of society who appear useful to the alien agenda or are open to varied forms of contact, and even then, the Greys lie to their chosen subjects on varied occasions.

Who's fooling who in this intricate, cosmic game of chess, one wonders?

There has been the suggestion that the Anunnaki are still monitoring the world through UFO technology and have maintained links with those persons residing at the top of society. This could well be a possibility, and if we investigate the Sumerian history, our culture operates in much the same way as the Gods had taught our ancestors. Do the Anunnaki have alternate plans for the Human? Are they to complete what they had first set out to do and annihilate their creation, save from their few human puppets who have reigned supreme and in secret? The truth regarding our Human genus would, I believe, radically alter our understanding of both life and the universe. We are NOT alone as has previously been enforced by the media, and those puppets who control from behind the scenes. But until that time, we must continue to research and peel away the skin of lies dripped into the minds of billions of souls upon this Earth by a corrupt force of evil bureaucrats who still hold us all in its shackles.

The facts surrounding our creation as a species would, I believe, topple society, along with those who serve only to control through fear, corruption and lies. The lies have been enforced to conceal terrible and amazing truths.

The deceit and propaganda are as clear to many who are now awakening to the dawning of new knowledge coming to the fore – knowledge that is, however, much older than us and which is being unearthed for all to see. As the saying goes: 'Seek and you shall find!'

FROM BRENDA BUTLER & PHILIP KINSELLA

Anyone remotely interested within the UFO field of investigations, is aware of the famous 1980 Rendlesham ufo event which occurred in Suffolk and known as 'Britain's Roswell' over the Christmas period, of 1980 and whereby members of the US military centred at the twin bases of RAF Bentwaters and RAF Woodbridge had been in direct contact with objects seemingly not from this world.

Little is known about the impending research which Brenda Butler, Dot Street and Jenny Randle's had eventually published in 'SKY CRASH: A Cosmic Conspiracy' back in 1984 by Neville Spearman Ltd and of the many problems they'd had in getting their story out.

What's even more startling is that Rendlesham area was no stranger to UFO activity, and the 1980 event was not the first of its kind.

Incidents witnessed by locals had been occurring prior to and well after the famous 1980 encounter, with many of the military troops stationed at the twin bases.

Brenda Butler teamed up with author and UFO investigator, Philip Kinsella, to put her own story across, and of the strange experiences she'd personally experienced.

What of the Reptilian man who was wanted by higher officialdom, and who'd also gained access to some of the world's top UFO investigators and senior military officials? Why did their book 'Sky Crash: A Cosmic Conspiracy' suffer through the onslaught of bad publicity by nameless, faceless bureaucrats? And why did the initial encounter with the military propel Brenda into a strange world where fate, it would seem, was to play its hand. Learn how Philip Kinsella's experiment worked in summoning a UFO within the forest and of the subsequent research he has also amassed. 'Sky Crash - Throughout Time' reveals these and many other mysteries.

FROM MALCOLM ROBINSON

Scotland as a nation, has seen a wealth of UFO sightings over the years, but none have been as so controversial then the 'Falkland Hill UFO Incident'. From large black triangular objects seen in the sky, to hundreds of 'small creatures' seen at nearby woods. This is certainly, Scotland's most unusual case of 'alien activity' and may push the boundaries of your belief. Nonetheless this book showcases all these bizarre encounters and more and will show that the ancient Kingdom of Fife in central Scotland, has its own tales to tell.

Seasoned UFO, and Paranormal researcher - investigator, Malcolm Robinson, with over 40 years of hands on experience in the varied fields of this subject to his name, will take you, the reader, through this fascinating case along with a plethora of other UFO cases experienced in Fife, it will leave you in little doubt that this ancient kingdom in central Scotland, has been touched by a most bizarre, and incredible series of events, that even today remains a startling yet controversial series of sightings.

The Reliability of UFO Witness Testimony

The Reliability of UFO Witness Testimony

By V.J. Ballester-Olmos & Richard W. Heiden (Eds.)

For 76 years, casual observers around the world have reported sightings of aerial phenomena unexplainable to them. More elaborate personal experiences have been reported by others whose testimony speak of close interactions with fantastic flying machines that land, from which strange beings descend, and even kidnap the onlookers. In the absence of compelling physical evidence of the reality of these narrations, how should science study immaterial observations and test these claims? The very standard of reputable witness reliability is at stake here.

The Reliability of UFO Witness Testimony is the first major book to comprehensively focus on the discussion and current views on problems and challenges posed by the reliability of UFO testimonies. This is a cross-disciplinary compendium of papers by 60 authors from 14 different countries. They are specialists in social, physical, and biological sciences, including psychology (predominantly) as well as psychiatry, sociology, anthropology, history, philosophy, folklore, religion, journalism, engineering, computing, medicine, education, analysts with experience in the critical study of UFO perceivers, and other professionals. This volume shares thematically convergent ideas about the plausibility of alternate explanations for an alleged close-range UFO phenomenon.

The 57 chapters in this book are divided into seven section headings: Case Studies, Psychological Perspectives, On Witness Testimony, Empirical Research, Anthropological Approach, Metrics and Scaling, and Epistemological Issues. There, the subject matter is analysed from statistical work to clinical assessment, psychometrics, comparative and evaluation inquiry, and other topic perspectives.

Some extracts from the Foreword, written by Dr. Leonard S. Newman, Professor of Psychology at Syracuse University:

"The contributors to this book include some very smart people. There are all sorts of issues to which they could be devoting their intellectual energy, and all sorts of scholarly and research contributions they could make. They don't have to write thoughtful and rigorous chapters for a book called The Reliability of UFO Witness Testimony, but this is what they have done. And so, the work continues, as attested to by the papers in this volume. I'm not sure if there exists any collection of papers on any topic that can claim to comprehensively summarize everything that is currently known about it. But this one comes pretty close."

This 711-page book has been released online in the Academia.edu portal, from where it can be downloaded for free:

https://www.academia.edu/101922617/The_Reliability_of_UFO_Witness_Testimony

Simultaneously, UPIAR Publishing House (Turin, Italy) has published two softcover, A4 format print editions, one in black & white, another in full colour (ISBN: 9791281441002). The book can be purchased through this link: http://www.upiar.com/index.cfm?artID=201

Four outstanding academics have provided praise notes to this volume. This is what they said:

Elizabeth Loftus, Ph.D., Distinguished Professor of Psychology at the University of California, Irvine, USA.

"When ordinary citizens claim to have extraterrestrial encounters, such as seeing UFOs or meeting with alien beings, what should we think? Did the alien abduction really happen or was it a hoax? Is someone deliberately lying? Are they false memories? Readers will be enthralled by the fascinating case histories that are presented in The Reliability of UFO Witness Testimony, a volume where sixty experts examine these issues with depth and insight. These cases teach us a great deal about how humans come to believe they have experienced bizarre events that may have never occurred at all."

Steven Jay Lynn, Ph.D., Distinguished Professor of Psychology, Binghamton University (SUNY), USA.

"This captivating book will appeal to anyone interested in UFOs (and who isn't?), the vagaries of memory, eyewitness perception and misperception, critical analysis of puzzling phenomena, and evaluating scientific vs. pseudoscientific claims. This volume ranks in the elite category of essential reading for students, scientists, and the seriously curious among us, and therefore has my highest recommendation. Bravo!"

Henry Otgaar, Ph.D., Professor of Legal Psychology, Maastricht University, the Netherlands, and Leuven Catholic University, Belgium.

"Claims of UFO sightings and experiences continue to fascinate us. This book has collected a unique and diverse set of case studies and critical articles on how such experiences unfold and what the authenticity of these claims is. The collection of these different articles is truly ground breaking and is the first-ever complete assemblage concerning the validity of UFO testimony."

Benjamin E. Zeller, Ph.D., Professor and Chair of Religion, Lake Forest College, Illinois, USA.

"In referring to extraterrestrial contact, Carl Sagan said that extraordinary claims require extraordinary evidence. This fine book seeks to contextualize what such evidence entails. Its contributors analyse UFO sightings and cases both famous and obscure, recent and historical, and quite international in scope. They draw from an impressive range of methodological, academic, and scientific perspectives, and consider such topics as the nature of cognition, memory, types of belief and testimony, psychology, and the rationality of belief. Skeptics, believers, and scholars of ufology will all find this book fascinating!"

What is the Jersey Devil?

By Paul Dale Robert
Email: jazmaonline@gmail.com

I once had an all-night layover in New Jersey. During which, I decided to head to the hotel bar and meet some of the passengers from my flight. On that night, I met Randy Morrison from Philadelphia, who once lived in Trenton, New Jersey. Randy to this day, is one of my Facebook friends and our final destination was Amsterdam. During our conversation, I asked Randy about the Jersey Devil aka the Leeds Devil of Pine Barrens, New Jersey.

Randy had an interesting story. He and his two older brothers went hiking in the Pine Barrens and at some point, during their hike, they heard a loud scream.

Randy said that the scream was ear piercing. It was a scream that Randy was unfamiliar with. Randy says that one of his brothers was about 50 yards in front of Randy and his other brother and claims he saw what looked like a goat's head peeking from behind a tree. Randy's brother freaked out and started running towards Randy and his other brother.

Randy and his two brothers ran all the way back to their cars and Randy's brother described seeing an odd -looking goat's head peeking from behind the tree. Randy's brother is sure that he saw the Jersey Devil and mentioned that even though he saw the goat's head, it didn't look normal, it looked devilish.

Other witnesses to the Jersey Devil say that the Jersey Devil is a flying bipedal creature, with a goat's head and hoofs. The cryptid also has large leathery wings.

Above Image: Jersey Devil

Randy felt like he had an answer to what the Jersey Devil is. Randy actually believes that the Jersey Devil is the infamous original Chupacabra of Puerto Rico. Randy says this is not the Chupacabra of Texas, a coyote with mange, but the original Chupacabra that was seen in Puerto Rico that also had wings. Randy mentions the 1840 livestock killings which are very similar to how the Chupacabra kills, not to mention the 1925 chicken slaughters in which a New Jersey farmer shot at the Jersey Devil. Randy says that everything points towards the original Chupacabra.

I must agree with Randy, it would appear that the Jersey Devil and the original Chupacabra are quite similar, except that the Jersey Devil has a goat's head and the original Chupacabra almost looks like a grey alien with large oval shaped eyes, small holes for nostrils, lipless mouth, no ears. The original Chupacabra are described as either having wings like the Jersey Devil or having spine like appendages in which the Jersey Devil has no spine like appendages. The original Chupacabra is said to be 4 to 5 feet tall, while the Jersey Devil is said to be 3 to 4 feet tall and in some cases as tall as 6 feet. As you can see there are some similarities and some differences.

The Lenape indigenous people of the Pine Barrens, believe that the Jersey Devil is a spirit that they call M'Sing. Locals came up with the legend that Mother Leeds, a witch from the 1900s cursed her 13th child, because she didn't want any more children. This 13th child transformed into the Jersey Devil. The Jersey Devil's father is said to be a demon. Other locals say that the story of the Jersey Devil has been passed around orally for a long time and was meant to provide entertainment to the children. But, if you ask Randy's brother who witnessed the Jersey Devil, this cryptid is very real and not a fantasy story made up by the locals. I also wonder if so many people believe in the Jersey Devil, did this entity manifest from the minds of many believers and in doing so, became what is known as a Tulpa?

A Tulpa is an entity that is born from the minds of people. Case example: Slenderman was created from the Internet, but so many people believe that Slenderman is real and now people are claiming that they have encountered Slenderman. Slenderman if real, is considered as a Tulpa. Another case example: Author Walter B. Gibson created the character The Shadow. Family and friends visiting Walter at his home were seeing a dark figure, wearing a brimmed hat, red scarf over the mouth and a long protruding nose. Family and friends were describing the character The Shadow. Walter was thinking so much of the character that he created, that from his mind came a Tulpa...The Shadow! The Jersey Devil possibly could be a Tulpa!

UK Space Chief Predicts More Alien Existence Answers Soon

Mankind's search for extraterrestrial life has captured the human imagination for millennia, and now the UK's Chief of Space Exploration shares an optimistic outlook on discovering more about alien existence in the upcoming years.

Libby Jackson, (Image above) who joined the UK Space Agency in 2014 and now heads up exploration, said there will be "more answers" in the coming years, when she is confident alien life will be found and confirmed. The 41-year-old official, who spent seven years working on the mission control of the European Space Agency's International Space Station and was appointed an Officer of the Order of the British Empire (OBE) in 2022, said that through deeper space investigation, extra-terrestrials can be proven to exist.

Alien life imminent

"Given the billions of galaxies, it's improbable that we're the only form of life," she stated in an interview with the Sunday Times. "In the upcoming decades, scientists will undoubtedly uncover more answers, and I want to ensure that the UK plays a significant role in this and that the knowledge gained from space benefits those on Earth," she elaborated.

Libby also admitted that, despite her enthusiasm for further research, she has never aspired to be an astronaut and prefers to remain grounded. She described a space rocket as a "controlled explosion." "Becoming an astronaut was never my dream. I never felt compelled to board a rocket, which is essentially a controlled explosion, and live in confined, malodorous conditions. However, mission control stole my heart due to my passion for problem-solving and teamwork."

Dr. Helen Sharman, (Image elow) the first Briton to journey into space, confidently declared in 2020 that "aliens exist, without a doubt." "With countless billions of stars in the universe, it's inevitable that various forms of life exist. Will they resemble us, made up of carbon and nitrogen? Maybe not… They might even be among us now, just invisible to our perception," she expressed.

The truth is out there

Additionally, astronaut Tim Peake, 50, who spent six months aboard the International Space Station, delved deeper into the extra-terrestrial subject last year, considering recent reports of unidentified aerial phenomena. Referring to the enigmatic objects documented by US combat pilots and Navy personnel, he commented, "I don't believe it's a creation of any terrestrial nation or organization whatsoever. The video footage is truly astounding. The capabilities of these machines are extraordinary. There's no clear explanation for it; several theories suggest it could be a product of a classified program, but if so, why would such information be disclosed? Could it be an automated probe sent by another civilization? I've heard a theory involving time travel: perhaps these are visitors from our own future?"

Flying Saucers, UFOs, USOs, and now UUPs

If you are relatively new to the subject of 'Flying Saucers;' a name which was coined way back in 1947, after the description given by Kenneth Arnold to an overenthusiastic member of the press corps, which stated the unknown convex shaped objects skimmed across the air like a saucer would over water. This name was adopted, although it was not a realistic description of the flying objects that Arnold witnessed, it or the term "Flying Disks" remained the descriptive name of the unknowns for a number of years.

The term "UFO" (or "UFOB") was coined in 1953 by the United States Air Force (USAF). Captain Edward J. Ruppelt, who headed Project Blue Book, then the USAF's official investigation of UFOs. He wrote,

"Obviously the term 'flying saucer' is misleading when applied to objects of every conceivable shape and performance. For this reason the military prefers the more general, if less colourful, name: unidentified flying objects. UFO (pronounced yoo-foe) for short, to serve as a catch-all title for all such reports.

In its initial definition, the USAF stated that a "UFOB" was "any airborne object which by performance, aerodynamic characteristics, or unusual features, does not conform to any presently known aircraft or missile type, or which cannot be positively identified as a familiar object". Accordingly, the term was initially restricted to that fraction of the cases which remained unidentified after official investigation, as the USAF was interested in, as they still claim today in 2023, potential national security reasons and "technical aspects."

Other titles which did not stick included, "Flying Flap Jack", "Unexplained Flying Disk" and "Unidentifiable Object". UFOs were also commonly referred to colloquially, as a "Bogey" by Western military personnel and pilots during the cold war. The term "bogey" was originally used to report anomalies in radar blips, to indicate possible hostile forces that might be roaming in the area.

The term UFO became more widespread during the 1950s, at first in technical literature, but later in popular use. UFOs garnered considerable interest during the Cold War, an era associated with a heightened concerns about national security, and, more recently, in the 2010s, for unexplained reasons. Nevertheless, various studies have concluded that the phenomenon does not represent a threat, and nor does it contain anything worthy of scientific pursuit (e.g., 1951 Flying Saucer Working Party, 1953 CIA Robertson Panel, USAF Project Blue Book, Condon Committee).

In popular usage, the term UFO came to be used to refer to claims of alien spacecraft, Although there is no undisputable proof this term is correct and because of the public and media ridicule associated with the topic, some ufologists and investigators today prefer to use terms such as "unidentified aerial phenomenon" (UAP) or "anomalous phenomena", as in the title of the National Aviation Reporting Center on Anomalous Phenomena (NARCAP). "Anomalous aerial vehicle" (AAV) or "unidentified aerial system" (UAS) are also sometimes used in a military aviation context to describe unidentified targets. More recently, U.S. officials have adopted the term "unidentified anomalous phenomenon" (UAP).

While technically a UFO refers to any unidentified flying object, in modern popular culture the term UFO has generally become synonymous with alien spacecraft; however, the term ETV (extra-terrestrial vehicle) is sometimes used to separate this explanation of UFOs from totally earthbound explanations.

It was during the 1960s that a new term became known by those following the subject globally. This time it referred to flying saucers or disks, if you wish, that appeared under the oceans, rivers and lakes around the world. And the USO was born.

Unidentified Submerged (or Submersible) Objects began to be mentioned in reports from many areas around the Earth. Such as Catalina island, Channel Islands USA, and Lake Baikal, in Russia and other areas.

We have been rebranded

To some extent the underwater objects have been rebranded with a new name, and that new name is to replace the term USO. To run alongside UAP (Unidentified Aerial Phenomena) we have UUP!

What is that I hear you say?

Well, Unidentified Underwater Phenomena is to replace the term USO.

An email exchange between Tim Gallaudet, a former Navy oceanographer and administrator of the National Office of Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and the Pentagon's All Domain Anomaly Resolution Office (AARO) reveals that unidentified undersea objects have been rebranded as Unidentified Undersea Phenomena (UUPs). This change mirrors the renaming of UFOs to Unidentified Aerial Phenomena (UAPs) by the military to remove the associated stigma. Or is it an attempt to remain ahead of investigators and researchers to hide information and to keep it away from prying eyes?

Possible interaction with children by the "Rex Heflin" UFO.

Sometimes witnesses come forward with their contact stories years after they happen. There are various reasons for this. Sometimes it stems from a fear of ridicule (even in this day of Tic Tac UAPs on the front page of The New York Times, UFO reports are still all too often accompanied by the X-Files Theme and rolled eyeballs on the nightly news). Sometimes it's just for lack of knowing where to report their encounters (MUFON.com is where you want to do that!).

I myself, sat on my own story for years: I simply didn't know there was somewhere you could report such things.

This incident took place in 1965. The witness was a child at the time of the incident, other children were involved. Years later, as an adult, the witness decided to report her experience to MUFON.

The incident involved the famous Rex Heflin UFO seen in Santa Ana California on August 3rd, 1965.

(Names and locations are redacted, for the witnesses anonymity. Otherwise, this is the case file exactly 'as is' in the MUFON Computer Management System).

MUFON Case File# 11934:

Witness Synopsis:

When I was 7 years old, my family lived in Riverside California. I was indoors, when we heard what sounded like the mother of all sonic booms, it literally shook our house, and caused the windows to shake in their frames. I was in the kitchen with my mom when this happened, my mom yelled 'Run!' So, I ran outdoors, to see what had caused this commotion.

The entire neighborhood had gone outdoors- The adults were talking together, and I could hear what they were saying. The consensus was that it must've been a sonic boom (we did have a nearby Air Force Base). People seemed to eventually calm down, so all of us 'kids' decided to stay outside, and play.

We were playing tag, when I noticed a beam of light was illuminating the little circle we were standing in; it was very bright, because remember, this was happening at 11:00 in the morning. The circle of light was almost like being caught in a spotlight, it had clear-cut edges, and within the beam of light there were different colour's, like those of a rainbow. The colour's were swirling around and around in a circle, when I put my hands out, whatever colour I saw would take over, then it would move on to the next colour, as though it were interacting with me.

I finally looked up, and I noticed that the adults were not moving; they seemed to be like statues, they weren't moving at all. And I could see the object, it was at least 30 feet or more across, maybe 50 to 80 feet in the air, and now 15 feet ahead of me.

The object was doing this fluttery motion, back and forth, as it moved, like a falling leaf. I ran, trying to catch up with the rainbow colour's again, the object kept flying silently, and I followed it down the street until I got to the end of the block, where I stopped, as I wasn't allowed to go beyond our block. So I stood there and watched it fly down the street until it was lost in the distance.
What's strange is that this object looked exactly like the photograph of the flying saucer taken by Rex Heflin. Exactly, down to every detail. When I looked up the date of the Heflin photograph, it was taken an hour and a half after I saw what appears to have been the same object, only 30 miles away from where we lived.

Later, that same night, I was awakened from a dead sleep, and I saw a 4 foot tall entity in a brown robe, who was standing silently in front of my bed. He communicated mind to mind with me, his eyes seemed to put me into a trance-like state. He reached-out a bony looking hand, and touched my arm with a long, silver tube, which caused me to instantly pass out. My next memory is that of waking up the next morning.

Witness interview: November 21st, 2021:
"On August 3rd, 1965, I was only 7 years old, but I remember this so clearly, it could've happened yesterday. There was a loud "explosion-like noise" outside, so witness my mom and I ran outdoors, to see what had caused the sound; nothing appeared to be amiss; other families had gathered outside as well (March Air Reserve base was nearby, so the adults gathered outdoors hypothesizing that the sound must've been a sonic boom).

"The other kids' moms were now socializing, when I noticed what appeared to be a colourful 'spotlight', shining down on the sidewalk.
I was moving my wrist in the light, and noticed that it seemed to settle on one colour, then when I moved my hand back and forth, it would change colour's. There was an interactive thing going on there…". After I'd been doing this for 30 seconds or so, the other kids had noticed, and ran over, and were now doing the same thing." "The beam of colored lights was sweeping the street from exactly one sidewalk to the next, back and forth. The light movement was so precise, but the disc appeared to be flying "wobbly". It was strange that the light beam was in such control coming from a craft that looked out of control. The spotlight area was moving down the street, so we kids started running after it, trying to catch up to it.

For some reason we weren't looking up to see the source of the light, and our parents didn't seem to notice anything: They just kept talking, as though they were oblivious that anything out of the ordinary was happening.
It was myself, and the 3 (Names Redacted) sisters, who lived a couple doors down from me. We were following the circle of colored light, as it moved up the street.
We were very excited, shouting about the space ship, and laughing, like kids do.
We didn't feel afraid, we were just playing, as the UFO was clearly interacting with us. If you've seen the photographs that Rex Heflin took that morning, you know exactly what we had seen. It didn't make any sound, at times it was hanging up there, defying gravity, even as a 7 year-old, I could tell that this was doing something impossible. With all of our shouting and excitability, none of our moms seemed to notice it.

I would've kept chasing after the flying saucer, except it finally reached the end of the sidewalk, and I wasn't allowed to cross the street. So we stood there, the sisters and I, and we watched as the UFO floated off, until it was lost in the distance."

Interview: November 22nd, 2021:

"No one had gone back into their homes when the kids started playing tag in the street. The mothers were still gathered in a group and the conversation had turned to local gossip when the kids got bored and started to play.

"Our parents were all watching, yet not reacting to what was happening. What happened was, we kids just followed the circle of light the craft was radiating. I'd put my hand in it, and as I turned my hand, the light went through all of the colors of the spectrum. We had to keep running after the light, because it was fun, playing with the colors. And it was beautiful. I'll never forget."

"When the beam of rainbow lights fell onto the kids we all saw it. At first we were delighted and some of the kids tried stepping on the colors as they hit the ground, but our delight quickly turned to shock and confusion. We all were looking down at our bodies and looking at each other in amazement as the colors washed over us. It may also be important at some point to notate that each color as it washed over us would eliminate all other colors and we only saw shades of that color i.e.; as the red came over there were only shades of red. The same as the yellow, no other colors, just shades of yellow. I want to say it was kind of like looking through a night vision lens."

"I lifted my arms and was looking at them in amazement when I glanced over at another kid across from me I saw he was standing frozen, like a statue. The mothers were behind me, so I did not see them frozen in place, but there was no longer any chatter coming from them. I assume they were also frozen. I did physically see with my eyes that the kids were paralyzed."

"I hadn't looked up yet at that point, I was only focusing on the swirling colors. The colors were swirling around and around and then they began to move down the street. I ran as fast as my little 7 year old legs could carry me. It wasn't until I ran about 4 houses that I looked up to my right and saw the disc. There was no noise coming from it at all."

I was impressed with the witness's candor and honesty. I interviewed her multiple times, often 'cold-calling' her, asking her to reiterate elements of her experience on the spot.
The witness never changed a single detail, nor wavered one iota from her original account. She spoke as from memory, not mixing-up details as one generally does when fabricating a story.

The level of emotion expressed was consistent to her experience. She was an excellent witness.

I did have the contact information for one of the other, now adult, witnesses. While she did answer my email, and confirmed that this incident took place, she felt she didn't feel at liberty to talk about the incident, as her husband is involved in local politics, and it could possibly harm his career.

I closed this case as an Unknown.

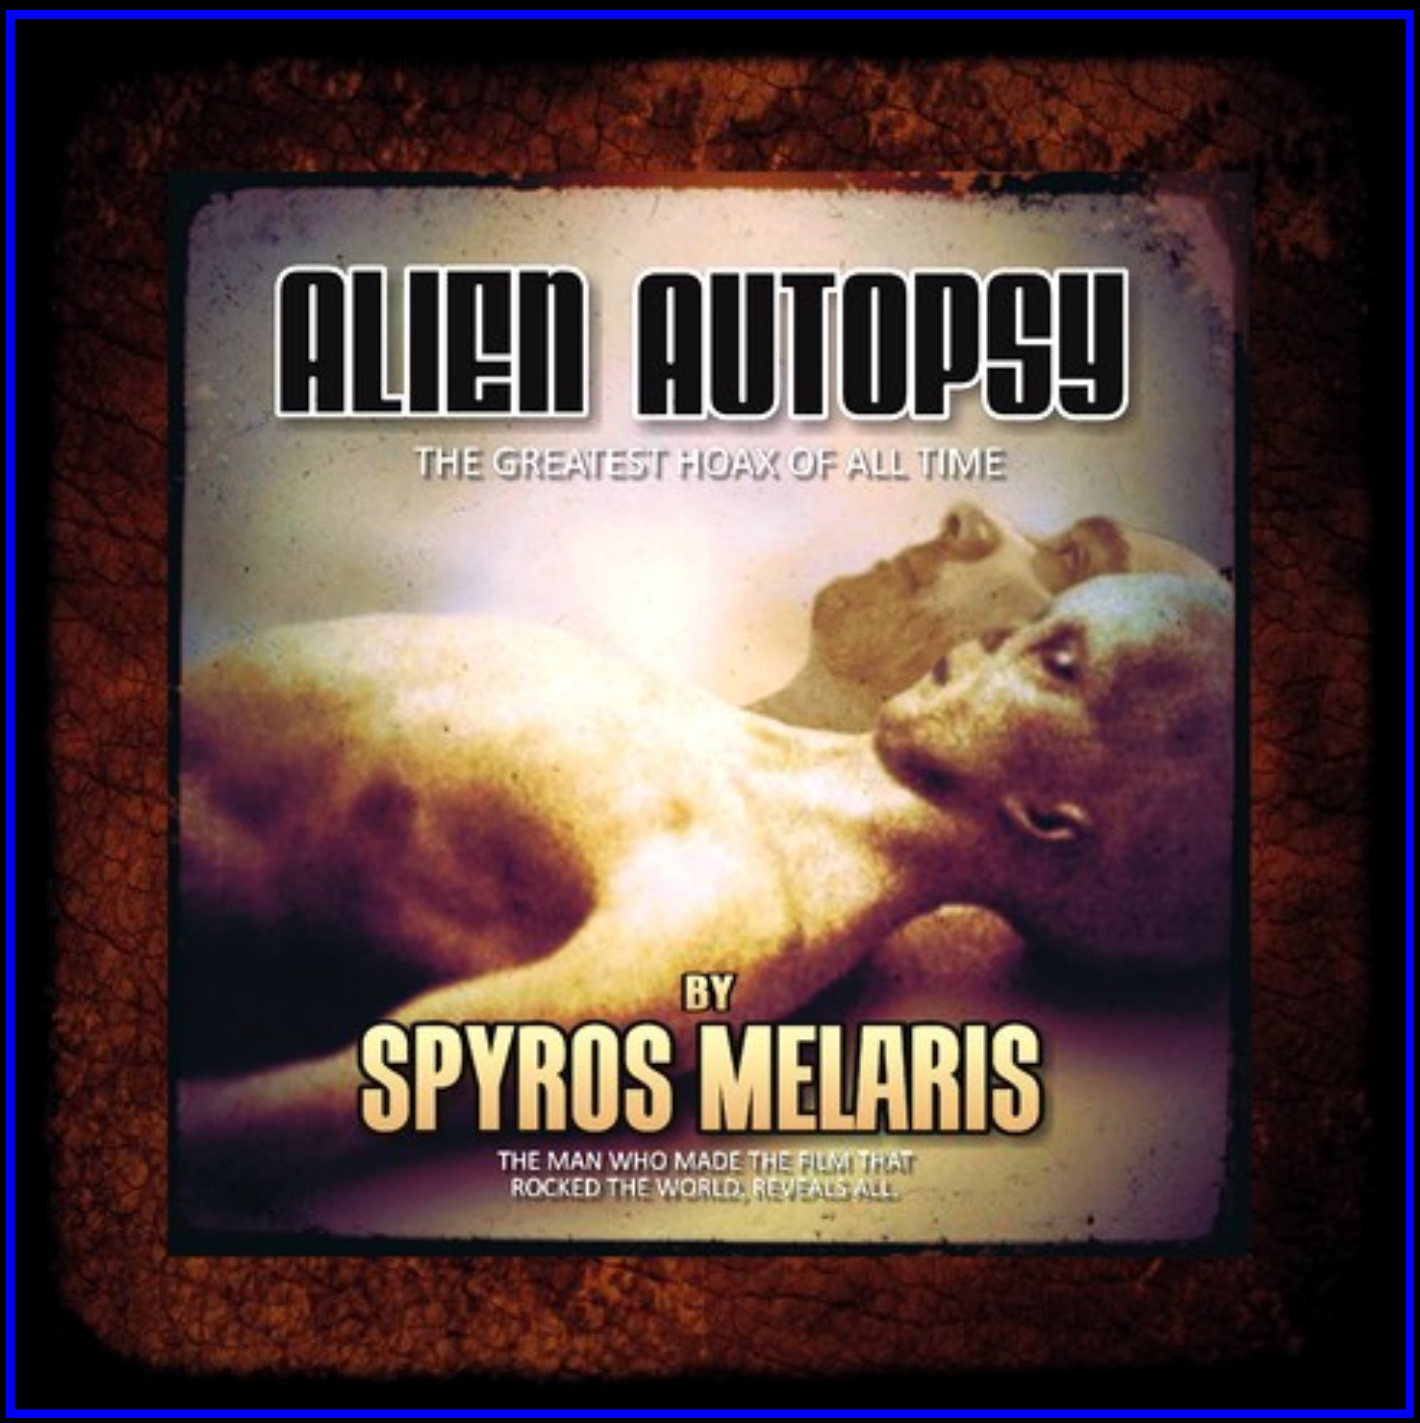
THE TRUTH!

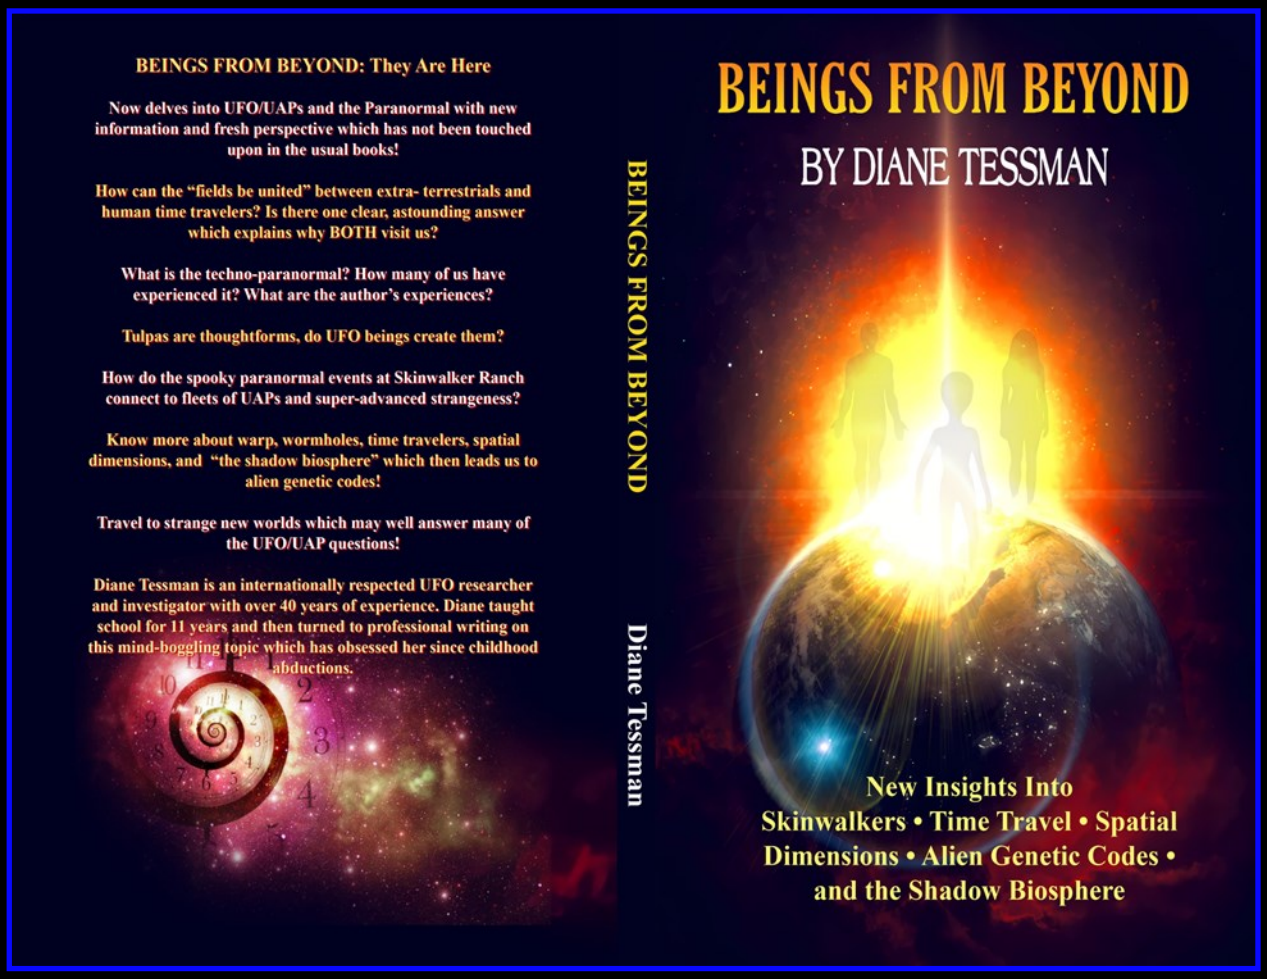


CLICK HERE TO GET THE TRUTH

WHY did this book meet publishing obstacles which are just plain strange and illogical? No, I won't specify, but I need to state it.

The powers-that-be do not want the specific source of UAPs/UFOs divulged; they feel we are not ready.

Breadcrumbs are better for us, & their power is safeguarded. Government will never admit to what it cannot control.



UAPS/UFOs are from a civilization beyond our current level of evolution. We are as Neanderthals were, when modern humans entered the world.

We are baffled, frightened, but we need truth.

The Answer is not nebulous, such as "from another dimension," or "some alternate timeline." The Answer is specific, so is this book. It contains years of research, investigation, and intuitive insight on UAPs, the paranormal and the mysterious genetics of past, present, and future.

Cross In The Sky Over Manhattan 1861

by Bob Spearing June 21, 2014

Several years ago while sitting in a Mormon Genealogy Library in West Caldwell, New Jersey, doing research on my family tree, I was perusing a microfilm containing the baptism registers of St. Peter's Church in Jersey City from the year 1858. That microfilm identified by the Mormon Catalog as FLS Film 1403371 contained an anomaly that can only be best described as a UFO sighting.

The page began normal enough with a number of baptism entries but near the bottom there was a handwritten note presumably from the parish priest. The note read exactly as follows:

"R. Thos. Kinder baptized on the 26th (Feb 1858) <unknown> now resides 44 Baxter St, New York. Mrs. T. Healey informs me that Elizabeth wife of R.T. Kinder, at said house, looking out of (out of) a garret window at 12 o'clock at night 29th March 1861 in the direction of The Church of The Transfiguration and in the sky saw a luminous cross distinctly well formed with a glowing light above it around the head of it and <unknown> <unknown> that the sky all <unknown> <unknown> was black and dark not a star to be seen. She awoke her husband Richard and who came to the window and (and) saw it and offered the same of the appearance of the sky <cross?>."

Additionally, besides the text, at the top of the next page of the register there was a drawing of the described object.

In the 1850s Baxter Street was in the notorious Five Points neighbourhood – the most densely packed sea of humanity in Manhattan at the time and the poorest of ghettos. It was the setting for the Martin Scorsese film "Gangs of New York." A "garret window" was the upper window of a two story frame house. Today, 44 Baxter Street remains facing east but the crowded tenements it faced are long gone replaced by Columbus Park. Five Points is now in the heart of Chinatown. The Church of The Transfiguration is still there but no longer the highest structure in the neighbourhood.

Little is known of the Kinders. They were from England. The father was naturalized in 1863. It can be deduced from the 1860 U.S. Census that the Healeys lived downstairs from the Kinders and that Richard, the father, was 28 when he saw the cross; Elizabeth was 23 and their children Elizabeth, Mary and Richard were 5 years, 3 years and 2 years respectively. In the 1870 Census Elizabeth is gone and presumed deceased. Richard was a salesman in both censuses.

What did they see?

An analysis of the object suggests it made no sound. It had a fuselage similar to an airplane. Light emanated from the area of a cockpit. It was travelling east towards Brooklyn and the East River. That night, in the neighbourhood according to the N.Y. Times and N.Y. Herald, there were three suspicious fires (one at a laboratory, one at a bookbindery and one at an ammunition factory).

What is apparent though is that in an age without flying machines, television or internet or reality shows with 15 minutes of fame for anyone and in an age of strong religious convictions, the Kinders account of a cross in the sky must be taken as a sincere description of an anomalous event over New York City

United States Warship Cases occurring in the Pacific Ocean

By Bob Spearing
MUFON Director of International Investigations

I went to see Terry Ray, an author and expert on orbs, at a Pittsburgh area MUFON Conference in 2014. I had witnessed a true orb sighting in the 1980s and was very much interested in seeing him after the publication of his book "The Complete Story of The World-Wide Invasion of Orange Orbs."

While waiting for him to speak, an older man behind me in the audience was engaged in conversation with someone I was not privy to. However, I suddenly heard the words "U.S.S. J.C. Owens" which was my dad's Destroyer during the Korean War. I turned around and told him my dad was on the J.C. Owens. He was gracious, allowed me to join the conversation, and he let me in on his UFO story. This fellow served on the J.C. Owens sister ship "The Leonard Mason." Remember that name!

Sometime between 1963 and 1964, The U.S.S. Leonard Mason (DD-852), commissioned in 1946, encountered a UFO off the coast of Cuba. I doubt this tale has ever been told before today. I fear this aged gentleman has since passed on. So, as an investigator, I must consider this story hearsay without correlating evidence. But I am a man about patterns. We need to see if this suspect case correlates to others in order to add credence to it! Is it legit or not? What I found was quite interesting.

For the majority of its career, The Mason was in the Pacific based out of Long Beach, California. In January 1963 it passed through the Panama Canal on its way to Boston Naval Yard where it was to be overhauled for modernized operations. It underwent what was called FRAM I which stood for Fleet Rehabilitation and Modernization Phase I. It began its journey back to the Pacific in February of 1964 and would have passed Cuba in that run back towards the Panama Canal to the Pacific.

Per Wikipedia: "The FRAM I program was an extensive conversion for the Gearing-class destroyers. This upgrade included rebuilding the ship's superstructure, electronic systems, radar, sonar, and weapons."

The Mason was a Gearing class Destroyer. It's refitting included, according to Wikipedia: "The Gyrodyne QH-50 DASH (Drone Anti-Submarine Helicopter) a small drone helicopter built by Gyrodyne Company of America for use as a long-range anti-submarine weapon on ships that would otherwise be too small to operate a full -sized helicopter."

Thus, the Mason had the earliest iteration of today's modern drone warfare architecture. Additionally, they were fitted with, according to Wikipedia, "The RUR-5 ASROC ("Anti-Submarine Rocket"), an all-weather, all sea-conditions anti-submarine missile system. Developed by the United States Navy in the 1950s, it was deployed in the 1960s, updated in the 1990s, and eventually installed on over 200 USN surface ships, specifically cruisers, destroyers, and frigates."

Most importantly here is that our sailor friend told me that during the FRAM I conversion, the Mason was outfitted with a highly sophisticated electronic surveillance system that was the precursor to today's modern GPS Systems. This is important.

On the day in question, this fellow allegedly was in the radio room. They began receiving messages over their newly installed hi-tech communications system that translated into geographic coordinates, specifically, latitude and longitude.

The U.S.S. Leonard Mason

Their ship was ordered to those coordinates and a very bright glowing object met them there hovering over their ship. Not being privy to what was happening, the sailor explained that when they returned to harbor in Miami, the advanced communications system they were testing was removed from their ship by civilians dressed in dark attire. These civilians were escorted onto the ship by marines carrying holstered weapons. They dismantled the experimental system and removed it. Following the confiscation, the commander of the Leonard Mason went on intercom and advised all sailors that they saw nothing and should report nothing concerning the experience. Was this a Men in Black (MIB) incident?

My only regret is that being new to official Ufology at the time, I did not press the old gentleman for more details. However, his story has led me to further investigate this case and this ship's background concerning other modern naval encounters!
It is clear to me that if UFOs indeed have a special interest in our nuclear capabilities, then Cuba would be a concern to them in the early 1960s and a point of interest in many other accounts.
I took the liberty of investigating what was occurring in the world between February and March 1964 when the Mason would have been near Cuba. The Beatles arrived in New York, Malcolm X is suspended by the Nation of Islam, the 24th Amendment is repealed outlawing Polling Taxes, Teamsters Union Boss Jimmy Hoffa is convicted of Jury Tampering and the Ford Mustang is debuted as well as the game show Jeopardy. While all these newsworthy items happened in this two-month zone, there is one additional item that stands out, namely, American President Lyndon B. Johnson "announces that the United States has developed a jet airplane (the A-11), capable of sustained flight at more than 2,000 miles per hour (3,200 km/h) and of altitudes of more than 70,000 feet (21,000 m)." This is again from Wikipedia and this is quite provocative as pertains to our study.
Like Vladmir Putin today, boasting that he has Hypersonic Missiles, this was clearly an American shout out to the Soviet Union with whom we were engaged in a Cold War with. Might prying Alien Eyes also be interested in this Earth-wide power struggle and were they taking sides? Namely, our side?
The 1960s gets much weirder and more intense, dangerously intense, going forward.
I came across another story similar to the one I heard in Pittsburgh in 2014. It was from a MUFON Case Management System (CMS) Report # 68658.
This witness continues with a story, our main story, "In 1963 I went on active duty, boarding the USS Dyess DD880. In 1966 we went to Viet Nam; upon our return I left the ship in January of 1967. In about 2007 or 2008 I went to a ship reunion. Speaking to 3 of my old shipmates they related to me that shortly after I left (1967), the ship went to Cuba for what we called a shakedown cruise. While there, one day the ship was 'on duty' and circling Cuba. The captain called over the loudspeakers for all hands, who were not on duty, to come topside. My friends went topside and they told me that they saw a UFO, about 1 mile wide following the ship."
Here is the report verbatim to MUFON. "The USS Dyess DD-880 was on a shakedown cruise to Gitmo (Guantanamo Naval Base) in Cuba. The captain called all hands-on deck and called for the special sea and anchor detail. We were headed right for a Copper Top and Silver Body UFO that we were tracking on Sonar and Radar. We were heading for the thing at 20 Knots. Most of us were either confused or scared. This thing was as big as the Forrestal Aircraft carrier. Not in height but, in length and we could see it from 10 miles away. All of a sudden, the thing started to move away from us at incredible speed and we lost the "contact". The captain said he would log it as another "unexplained mystery" of the Bermuda Triangle. Apparently, the captain {knew?} much more about the place then we did."
The witness continues, "I was nineteen at the time and have been reliving that experience almost every day since we saw it. By we, I mean every man on the Dyess that wasn't on duty. Maybe two hundred of us. I know many of us have passed away. The captain and the XO and several of my ship mates. I've told people about the experience and they just "snicker". I was interested in finding out if the logs of the USS Dyess were researched by you or the incident had ever been made public."
"The evidence would be in the logs of the Dyess from the spring of 1967 entries under CDR Frank C. Mead, USN. Captain USS Dyess (known as the Steamin' Demon) a Fletcher Class Destroyer commissioned 21 May 1945" our witness concludes!
A UFO as big as an Aircraft Carrier! We will see this again by trained sailors!

The U.S.S. Dyess

These incidents raise the possibility that something(s) may have happened of special interest concerning the U.S. Navy sometime between 1963 and1967 near Cuba. We will never be able to pinpoint how many reports there may have been but a discerning researcher can at least make a determination that something between those years occurred in multiple accounts that included U.S. Navy Destroyers and (as we shall soon see) Cuban Mig Fighter Jets. One obvious conclusion is that if the U.S. Navy and Cuban reports are based in fact, the UFOs clearly had a desire to align with U.S. Forces rather than Russian aligned forces at a time when U.S.-Russian Nuclear threats were at an elevated level. Perhaps this can be read as possibly encouraging for the United States.

gist Bob Pratt seeking info on a March 1967 incident surrounding the 6947 Security Squadron near Key West requesting info on a downed MIG during a possible encounter with a UFO in 1967.

The second document is the 1967 Cuban MIG Downing Incident as given to us by the late UFO researcher Stanton Freidman. The document even contains handwritten notes and the initials of Stanton Friedman. No satisfactory response was ever received back from the FOIA.

What is intriguing here is that while the UFO did not initiate any hostile action, it felt well within its rights to exterminate a potential "human "threat. If UFOs are here for benevolent purposes, could this incident have been avoided by the UFO simply brushing off the attack by a far inferior opponent? Good question to ask. It's our planet anyway, right?

Another earlier account occurred about June 15, 1966 at sea off the coast of Vietnam per The National UFO Reporting Center also known as NUFORC. The time was 3:00 AM and the event occurred over several hours. The shape of the craft was listed as "flash" which usually means something extremely short-termed as in seconds

Dear Sir:

Under the Freedom of Information Act, I hereby request the following information:

All messages, memos, log notations, reports, documents or analyses pertaining to the following incident: In March 1967 the 6947th Security Squadron based at Boca Chica Naval Air Station near Key West, Fla., was monitoring Cuban military communications and learned of the destruction in mid-air of one of two MIG-21 jets scrambled to intercept a bogey approaching the Cuban land mass from the northeast at an altitude of about 10,000 meters and a speed approaching Mach 1. The bogey was described as a bright metallic sphere and the wing leader's plane disintegrated in air just after his radar had locked onto the target and he had armed his weapons to destroy the object. After the MIG disintegrated without any sign of smoke or flame, the object quickly accelerated to 30,000 meters and disappeared in the direction of South America.

If these documents are classified, I request they be submitted for review in order that all or portions thereof can be released.

In March of 1967, the 6947th Security Squadron based with the Boca Chica Naval Air Station near Key West, Florida recorded this incident. The mission of the 6947th is the monitoring of all Cuban military communications.

Cuban radar installations reported a bogey approaching the Cuban land mass from the north-east. 2 MiG-21 interceptors were scrambled when the bogey crossed Cuban air space at an altitude of approximately 10,000 meters and at a speed approaching Mach1. The interceptors were directed to the Bogey by Cuban Ground Control Intercept and were guided to within 5 kilometers of the object. The wing leader reported the object was a bright metallic sphere with no visible markings or appendages. After a futile attempt to contact the object for identification, Cuban Air Defense headquarters ordered the wing leader to arm his weapons and destroy the object. The wing leader reported his missiles armed and his radar locked-on. Seconds later the wing man began screaming to the ground controller that the wing leaders aircraft had exploded. After regaining his composure he further reported that there was no smoke or flame, the aircraft had disintegrated. Cuban radar reported the object quickly accelerated and climbed beyond 30,000 meters and at lastreport was heading south-south east towards South America.

A spot report was sent to National Security Agency headquarters, which is standard procedure in any case involving aircraft loss by an enemy country. NSA is required to acknowledge receipt of such a report, however they didn't and therefore we sent a follow-up report. Within hours we received orders to ship all tapes and pertinent intelligence to the Agency and were told to list the incident in the squadron files as aircraft loss due to equipment malfunction.

Normally never asked for tapes —

Received by Stanton T. Friedman, October 27, 1977 from writer who was describing a first hand experience. Numerous questions have been asked of the writer. Name and address on file by S .T. Friedman but the story suggests something much lengthier. "For several hours, unseen craft overhead blasted North Vietnam Junks, saving numerous American lives."

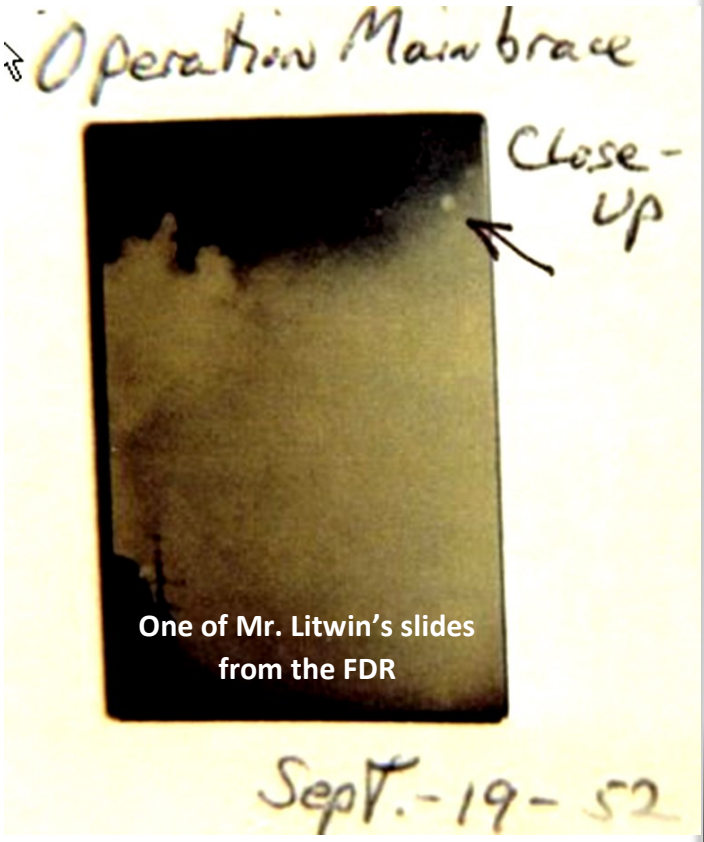
The witness continues" I spent years on a ship (in plotting) during the Viet Nam era (1966 to 1968), where I used all available equipment to track and plot each aircraft over and off Viet Nam soil. This sighting was in 1966, not sure what month."

The witness continues, "One time, I swear someone (or something) saved our guys on four River Gun Boats (three-man crews) when around 0300 they did their best to hold five North Vietnam Junks full of guns and explosives until the sun came up so they could check them for weapons and such and to also take prisoners. I was on duty on the Bridge with my Flak Jacket and helmet when suddenly just before the sun came up all hell broke loose. The Junks all began to fire at the River Boats (at me too). The River Boat crews held their own as best they could, but I saw several of the crew hit badly during the fire fight."

"All of the sudden, four of the five Junks were blown out of the water by some unseen friend overhead. They just exploded into oblivion, leaving no residue. I saw only one flash, what looked like a lightning bolt, hit a Junk and it exploded. I hit the deck when bullets from the junks started hitting all around my head. The last Junk gave up quickly, and our ship took credit for the save. I saw it! I know we did not do it, but since truth is stranger than fiction, I left it at that. Thank you, friends, whoever you were. You saved our guys. Unfortunately, all I have to offer is my word, no pics. I had pics, though not of the unseen craft that fired on the Junks. I took pics because that was part of my job to document the firing activity of our ship, but we were never allowed to keep a private camera (because of what we saw daily with the Russians). The only pics I had were OK'd by the {reigning} head of Naval Security Headquarters at ComSecGruAct West Pacific Station, Yokosuka, Japan. Wish I had hidden a few rolls, they were something to see. I attest to this as fact, and to other sightings during various conflict actions during the years 1966 and 1968 in and around the Viet Nam conflict area when I served aboard a U.S. Naval vessel. When on duty in plotting I saw numerous blips on my screens that we all knew were not our aircraft and had no idea who's they were. I assume some of these blips were our unseen friends who saved our guys. I know there are other military personnel who can also attest to such happenings during this same period because being Naval Security, I heard the stories. I hope they have the courage to come forward as I just have and risk being humiliation."
So, we have a second report of UFOs possibly allying themselves with the U.S. Navy. One could only surmise that after our disastrous politically motivated defeat in Vietnam due to politicians running roughshod over our generals, that our interlopers from wherever, might just decide to change sides!

Let's look at some other events prior to Vietnam that may offer clues! One is the first infamous Franklin Delano Roosevelt Air Craft Carrier encounter during Operation Mainbrace in the English Channel, the very 1st NATO Naval Exercise after WWII. As many know, the exercise was plagued by UFO reports. One particular seaman named Wallace Litwin took several photos of UFOs seemingly observing Operation Mainbrace and the FDR on September 19, 1952. It is important to note that the FDR was the first Air Craft Carrier to ever take nuclear weapons to sea in 1950.
Additionally, for an historical frame of reference, in 1952, the United States Capitol building was buzzed by UFOs that summer in the same month The United States detonated its first hydrogen bomb. 1952 also saw a flap of UFO runway incursions at Strategic Air Command Nuke Bases!



One of Mr. Litwin's slides from the FDR

On January 1st, 1954, the FDR was again involved with UFOs. This particular account is from MUFON Case # 7099 and occurred around 3:00 P.M. on January 1, 1954 during the Korean War. The witness refused to state the Carrier's location but Wikipedia suggests that on January 7, 1954, the FDR was on its way around the bottom of South America passing Cape Horn on its way to be rehabilitated in similar fashion to the Leonard Mason several years later. Only this time, the FDR was going the other way from the Atlantic to the Pacific on up to Washington State where it was to be decommissioned for refit on April 23, 1954 at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard.

Witness states, "Although I would like to divulge detailed information to you, I must first think of my family. As an officer on the FDR (the Aircraft Carrier), I too witnessed a daytime event involving a cigar shaped craft that covered a span of at least 100 feet, a larger 300+ foot cigar and two 50-foot (roughly) round discs."

The seaman continues "Without stating my position, I will state that we attempted to engage the craft with weaponry and in the 10 minutes of viewing and the 4 minutes of this attempt, the weapons would not allow themselves to be prepared for engagement. We also attempted to prepare launch of aircraft at the conclusion of the event. I was informed of the object when it arrived by fellow officer who engaged me in conversation concerning the proper procedure in dealing with this type of event. At the 14-minute mark the craft rapidly travelled upward as two small round objects exited the water. At the 21-minute mark, a much larger cigar arrived from directly above the FDR and the two smaller disks entered the cigar and then the cigar once again departed upward at 23 minutes roughly. At 26-minute mark the cigar returned and dove into the water."

What is remarkable is that, in this report, we have two objects exiting the sea. In our 21st lexicon concerning UFO and USO events, these two objects are now labeled "Trans-Medium" vehicles. Nothing new under the sun as the saying goes although the latest incarnation of our governmental UFO Office will lead you to believe Trans-Medium vehicles are something new!

Also, we again have a large cigar, not quite Aircraft Carrier size in this report but seemingly a mothership indeed with smaller objects operating in conjunction with it.
Per the NICAP Chronology, yet another incident involving the FDR occurred at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, on July 26, 1956 when two discs hovered over the carrier one over the other one. The discs had two rows of lights blinking counter-clockwise. The top disc released a fireball that disappeared into the lower disc. The release of fiery orbs from larger mothership objects is a quite common

Illustration submitted by witness for MUFON Case #7099

UFO related phenomenon. Again, this bears similarities to the FDR account January 1st, 1954 with two objects working in concert with a cigar shaped mothership. Coincidence? I don't think so.
Perhaps the most deeply investigated case involving the FDR occurred near Cuba (again!!) in October of 1958. An 18-year-old seaman named Chester Grusinski related the following to author and researcher Jon Baughman. Grusinski has doggedly pursued finding witnesses to buttress his claims ever since.
"In the year 1958, we were on a shakedown cruise when there was a small light that was following our ship. Then the light came right at us; it came in close enough to us so you could see the shape of the object and also see that there were figures inside of it. The impression that I got was that those figures were not human beings.".

"I saw a bright white ball of light It headed straight for us, getting bigger and brighter. It was spherical, approximately 75 to 100 feet in diameter. It turned red orange and I could feel the heat on my face. As this was going on, the man on watch was yelling into the intercom for an officer to get up on deck.

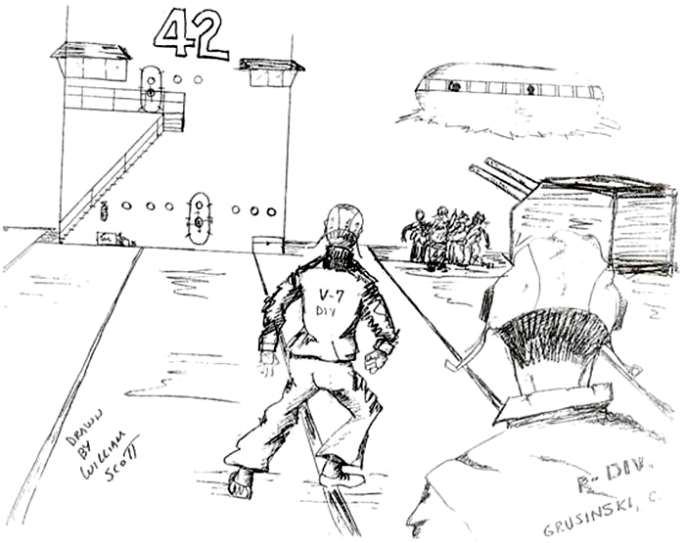
“I could see silhouettes of figures looking at us. They had no features but you could tell they weren’t human. Then the bottom turned cherry red and it vanished in a flash.”

Soon after the incident crew members who talked about it were transferred. Then the CIA (might have been the Naval Investigative Service or NCIS) came on board to investigate a so-called "gambling problem." It was a massive coverup. There was no gambling.”



Drawing by William Scott of Chester Grusinski

Scott’s illustration of the Grusinski incident is detailed and quite disturbing. It is a close up of the objects that seem to have been surveilling the nuclear bomb capable Aircraft Carrier for more than half a decade! While no mother ship is observed here, we now have entities looking out of windows at this Carrier.
Windows! Entities? We must consider now that who or whatever is taking a years long interest in the FDR, have eyes and need windows! And they must be approximately the same stature as humans! Most likely entities with 1 head, 2 arms and 2 legs! What are the odds that aliens are just like us and need windows in their craft! This is getting stranger by the minute (and decade!)
Thus concludes the FDR reports. Back to Vietnam.
NUFORC has a case occurring on September 15, 1966, early morning about 1:30 A.M. in the Pacific Ocean presumably near Vietnam. The witness states this 5-minute encounter went down as follows: “object {was}in water 2 feet from boat {and} made a straight right turn at high speed.” This is an early report of “USO Fast Movers!”

Witness states “I was on look out on ocean minesweeper USS Embattle MSO-434 {when} starboard lookout called me to look at something. It was raining and 7-foot waves. It appeared that the water running off of the deck was making a trail in the water 2 feet from our starboard bow. When the boat rolled to port the trail was still there even though the water was running of the port side. “

Minesweeper USS Embattle MSO-434

Witness continues, “After about 5 minutes, it made a straight right turn and left at a high rate of speed. You could hear it moving through the water like a fishing line. It was about 10 inches long and 3 inches around. It could not have been a porpoise or a submarine. We could not see anything under the water because it was just too dark. I was in the navy 11 years. I am a trained observer.”
Was this USO a type of drone back in the 1960s? If so, whose? We were barely launching DASH toy helicopters off the back of battle ships in the 1960s in Asia.
MUFON Case # 64690 June 15 1969
“My ship was hit in 68 and I saw 2 glowing objects in 69. I was on the St. Paul CA-73. I saw the show about the riverboats in Viet Nam. I am connected to that story in that I was on another ship the USS Saint Paul (CA-73) that was in the same place at the same time and was hit. The St. Paul is almost as large as a battleship. “

USS St. Paul CA-73

Witness continues, “The report was we were hit by artillery fire. This was no such animal. I never told this story much before because it’s like bigfoot. I was on the ship one year later when I saw two orange balls of light come out of the sky and hover over the coast of Viet Nam about 5 miles south of the DMZ. I watched them for four hours then F-4 Phantoms chased them away. I was told to keep quiet about the matter."

The 1968 incident the witness is most likely alluding to is when the Australian guided missile destroyer The HMAS Hobart (D-39) was hit by missiles from an unknown source possibly friendly fire from an American ship. However, the story suggests an interloper such as a UFO may have been involved in the horrific damage to the Australian ship on June 17-18, 1968.

MUFON Case # 54584 July 1, 1969, Sea of Japan

US CGC Mellon (WHEC 717)

This next case is particularly personal to me. When reviewing it in the MUFON database, I thought I recognized the witness's name. Joe Foster. I knew a MUFON fellow in New Jersey very dedicated to the UFO question. I called the witness and it was the Joe I knew. He is a highly intelligent, highly respected member of the UFO community and he was taken aback that I had found his report submitted to MUFON back in 2015. Joe gave me additional information on the case as well as 2 others!

Joe Foster has provided his DD214 to show he was actually in the military. Below is a piece of the report:

"This sighting took place 45 years ago {reported 2015}. The event including personnel in CIC (oncoming and off going shifts) the Bridge (oncoming and off going shifts), the Captain and Radio officer for a total of perhaps 20 people. No debriefing provided.

In July 1969 I pulled my first Ocean Station Vector patrol. It was during this patrol that Apollo 11 took place. The weather (I cannot remember the actual date) was clear and mild. There was no cloud cover and weather and sea conditions were perfect and comfortable.

The sighting took place during watch change (I was on the ongoing Mid Watch so the time was approximately 23:45 hrs. (11:45PM). The watch consisted of 1 OOD (Officer of the Deck), 1 QMOW (Quartermaster of the Watch), and 4 other bridge watch standers. The off-going Watch consisted of the same. Also on the bridge was the skipper (senior Captain - O6) in the Coast Guard - Master Mariner. While going through the correct procedures for assuming shift responsibilities, the bridge was "squawked" by CIC (Combat Information Center) by our air search radar operator who reported that there were "targets" closing on the ship and that there were 3 targets approaching out of the Northeasterly direction and a course heading of Southwest. Speed was reported incredulously as being approximately 3500 mph. Having been given the vector, everyone on the bridge ran out to the Starboard bridge wing (ship had a heading of roughly north) which put that wing facing the oncoming targets coming out of the Northeast. The targets were picked up roughly on the horizon and viewed as they flew directly over the ship during which time most of the personnel on the bridge headed through the bridge to the Port bridge wing to observe the targets (3 bright white lights) disappear on the horizon. Because of the height of the bridge wings (44' above the waterline) by using some spherical trig, the speed was able to be ascertained to be (3200 mph), again radar had it at 3500 mph). After the sighting, it was determined that a sitrep (report on the current military situation in a particular area) be submitted via protocol which was done by the ships Radio Officer (Mr. Curry). The report, after being duly completed was sent to the radio shack where it was, I assume, encrypted and transmitted."

Mr. Foster gave me an additional education on what he and his ship were doing.

Ocean Station Victor was a geographic location located at 34.0N latitude by 134.0 E longitude and consisted of 10 1 square mile surveillance grids from where we would transmit navigational information for ships and planes making a transoceanic crossing. From this location, we also were able to provide assistance to aircraft and ships for both navigational purposes and for providing medical and other emergency support. OSV is located generally midway between Hawaii and Japan. It was a day or two before Apollo 11's splashdown that would take place several hundred miles south of our OSV position. At the time of the sighting, the ship was facing north. It was night time, and the sky was brilliant with stars however, no moon. Th "objects" were taking an apparent great circle route heading southwest towards Guam. The objects were bright white lights traveling per radar track at 3,500 mph. A SITREP report under JANAPS 146 C requirements was apparently submitted by Captain Otis Abney as the event was perceived to possibly impact national security.

Specifically, the lights were small like stars in a steady formation and took approximately 7 seconds to fly from horizon to horizon, directly over the ship.

A second peculiar sighting happened e same ship to Joe Foster in May of 1970. While anchored in the Gulf of Siam near Vung Tau in the South China Sea in the Republic of Vietnam waters, Captain Abney gave orders authorizing swim call as we awaited combat orders back to Song Ong Doc to provide support for a Navy Seal base there. Being that Foster was the QMOW during the event, he along with several other crew members, also standing watch were up on the Port bridge wing observing the crew swimming off of the aft 1/3rd of the ship, also on the port side. It was at this time, a large black object was observed silently gliding from beneath the ship (it was observed but multiple crew members). This observed object was 100 feet long and 35 feet wide. Given our 2 previous USO encounters during the Vietnam War, this mass sighting military incident gains immense credibility.

Mr. Foster's ship recorded one more anomalous occurrence one month later in June of 1970.

A silver sphere reflecting sunlight that appeared to be the size of a quarter held at arm's length was seen by QM Foster, QMC Harden, Captain Abney, LTJG Bills and the Flying Bridge lookout on duty.

Again, the ship was 2 days out of Guam heading back to Honolulu, Hawaii. Ship was making way at 22 knots. The Object when first sighted (we were shooting morning stars from the Starboard bridge wing) was observed heading straight towards us from the front and was on a heading exactly the opposite of the one we were on. Its estimated speed was about 60 miles per hour at the time of the sighting. It was also flying at a relatively low altitude of about 500 feet above the ocean surface. The object, probably because of its low altitude was not tracked on radar. Captain Abney, even though he reported the sighting approximately one year before, after observing this unique object decided that it was not worth reporting, probably because after spending over 30 years at sea (you will see all types of things) this in of itself was not that important, therefore, he returned to shooting morning stars and not having the sighting reported.

There is one additional point that should be made. Even though it is anecdotal, it still bears repeating. After Mr. Foster returned to Hawaii and made one more OSV cruise, he was sent to several Navy "A" schools located at Pearl Harbor. He stayed in the barracks on Ford Island in front of the Battleship Arizona memorial, his classes were also held on Ford Island. During his off time, he made friends with a Navy yeoman who also worked on the base near the schools. One day they were playing tennis on the courts in front of the barracks and Foster related his UFO stories to his tennis partner. At this point, his partner started laughing. Of course, Foster thought it was because he believed in UFOs however, his partner said that wasn't the reason he was laughing. He (the yeoman) said that his organization received "thousands of those reports every year, just from US Naval vessels". He went on to say, "these objects were observed coming out of the water, flying into the water and flying up into the upper atmosphere." This serviceman worked for an organization also located on Ford Island at the time known as FICPAC (Fleet Intelligence Central, Pacific). Note: also stationed at Pearl Harbor at the time was Lt. Cdr. Bobby Ray Inman (in the future to become an admiral and deputy director or the CIA and director of the NSAJ).

What is apparent in all these reminiscences so far is that the witnesses appear sincere and have extensive military knowledge which removes most of the risk of hoax! Additionally, E.T. or whoever these interlopers are, seem to favor America! That, presumably, is a good thing! Moreover, this is decades before the term "Trans-Medium Vehicle" became vogue.

A final interesting note concerns ancillary activities of some of these war ships! The Coast Guard Cutter Mellon was on OSV, several hundred miles north of the recovery zone for Apollo 11 when it had its UFO sighting around the same time the Apollo 11 mission was returning to earth. The Okinawa was the recovery ship in the North Pacific for Apollo 15 on August 7, 1971. The Leonard Mason was the recovery ship for Gemini VIII on March 17, 1966 also in the Pacific near Okinawa. The New Orleans was the recovery vessel for Apollo 14 on February 9, 1971, near American Samoa also in the Pacific! All three ships were intertwined with America's Moon Missions and UFO encounters in the Pacific!

Next up is a Chilean Navy ship encounter with a large UFO that was tracked on radar.

It occurred just after midnight on October 24, 1969 somewhere off the Chilean Coast. This account is from the annals of Bill Chalker, one of Australia's leading UFO researchers!

Bill Chalker writes," It happened in the Pacific Ocean, about 350 miles to the south of Valparaiso Port, off the coast of Chile. The incident involved a Chilean Naval destroyer and was witnessed by crew members and the commander of the vessel. Up to six UFOs, including one large object, were observed. The objects were verified on radar and observed visually. As the main object moved over the ship, the vessel's power went out."

"At 12:43 A.M. the radar officer reported a long-range flying contact. A minute later the "contact" was at 400 miles. Because of the "object's" speed, the operator suspected a malfunction in his equipment. In the next minute the contact was approximately 150 miles away closing from 331 degrees of true north. But the operator and officer in charge during the late-night duty (an officer of second-class rank) speculated that the contact was a "plane flying southeast" --but at 213 miles in a minute: 12,780 mph!"

"The officer in charge advised the ship's commander, who asked that an eye be kept on the object. At 12:47 the contact was only 12 miles away. Suddenly the single contact became six "targets." The "thing spread .... Little dots appeared in the fire of the light on the radar...." The officer in charge informed the commander just as the objects making the returns came into view. Both eyewitnesses and radar were reporting six objects approaching the ship. The commander came up to the ship's bridge to see what was going on."

"It was a fantastic sight. One massive object and five small objects were approaching at high speed. The "big thing looked like a big box [with] semicircles in the side" looking as if they had been scooped out. It was bathed in brilliant light. "The thing must have been metallic," my informant told me. "It was bigger than the destroyer, which was about 110 meters long." He thought it might be at least twice the length of the ship but it was difficult to tell because "the light was bright."

"The five smaller objects were egg-shaped and appeared to be no bigger than eight feet long and five to six feet wide. They were bluish in color. At about 2000 yards out from the destroyer the smaller objects left the proximity of the larger object. Three went portside and two went starboard. The smaller objects at times seemed to be flying in "elliptical circles backwards and forwards between the big one and our vessel. The main thing did not change direction -- if it had been in the sea there would have been a collision. A humming noise was audible when the large object got to within 300 yards. It was at this point that the power went out. For a couple of seconds all instruments went dead as the huge craft passed overhead. At this point the commander came on to the bridge, asking, "What the hell is that?" My informant remarked that the commander "was very calm, because probably he knew what he saw. We didn't.

You could see the whole thing; the light was so strong. You could see the water, the funnel head, the head of the ship, the towers, everything... Everybody on the bridge was sort of listening to the noise. I don't know how long this thing took to go across. The bright red lights underneath the main UFO seemed to be moving back and forth inside the "box," shining through a half-circle or crescent shape on the bottom of the object. On the side were what looked like "corn cobs," with green or turquoise pulsing lights. These lights, my informant said, "went right through your head. The large object passed over the powerless ship. When it was 200 yards away, everything returned to normal. The smaller objects, never coming closer than 500 to 1000 yards, flew around the ship and joined up with the larger object on the other side.

The main object continued on its way until it was about two miles beyond the ship. At that point, along with (we assume) the smaller-objects, it vanished. "It was like somebody opened a big door; then it closed and it was darkness. The only thing that was left behind was like floating little bits of metallic paper."

At least eight minutes had passed. Three persons had tracked the UFOs on radar. Five persons saw the objects themselves. The ship's commander ordered everyone to keep silent about what they had seen."

MUFON Case # 56955 November 7, 1970, Vietnam.
"While flying at about 18000 feet, a UFO flew formation on me." The pilot begins, "While flying a TPQ (ground radar controlled) bombing mission in Vietnam during 1970, I was directed to fly a northerly heading to reach my target that I was to drop my bombs on. A TPQ bombing mission involved the pilot flying his aircraft at a set altitude and airspeed and the ground radar would direct you over the target and tell you when to drop your bombs on the target. The ground radar figured the drop based on actual airspeed, configuration of the bombs, wind, altitude and glide angle of the bombs. I was flying at about 18,000 feet under radar control on a night bombing mission. I looked out to my right and started to observe another aircraft approaching my aircraft. It was a bright starry night and I do not recall noticing a moon. My eyes were adapted to night vision, so I could make out the shape of the aircraft as it approached and noticed that it had blinking or pulsating lights along the entire length of the aircraft. I called my radar controller and asked if I had traffic in my area and he replied "no, you are the only aircraft on my scope". I continued to fly and noticed the aircraft appeared to be quite large compared to my small A-4E Skyhawk, a single engine, single pilot aircraft that is only 47 feet long and with a 27-foot wingspan. This aircraft appeared to be several times larger than my aircraft and came in closer to me. I could see the lights better and the shape was more of a cigar shaped object. I again asked the controller if I had traffic and again, he replied no, and continued to give my direction control to my target.
The object flew formation on me for about 10 minutes and then abruptly changed course and climbed out of sight rapidly to my right and up. I heard no sound other than my engine and could see no signs of propulsion from the object. I once again asked about traffic and was told no other aircraft were around me. I completed my flight to the target, dropped my bombs and returned to my airbase at Danang, Vietnam. This happened between Danang and the DMZ between North and South Vietnam. We were told during our first week of flight school at Pensacola Naval Air Station, that if we ever reported seeing a UFO, we would be sent to an Air Force base in CO and would stay there until either we decided we had not seen a UFO or we would be discharged from the service as a Section 8 (mental). Needless to say, I did not report this sighting."
Next up is MUFON Case # 121854. 1970. This is a really good case! The Signalman Petty Officer, Third Class, on USS King DLG-10 brings us an extraordinary report. His name was Greg Andrews!
"I was on a fog watch forward on the ship in the Sea of Japan in 1970. It was late and dark. My watch partner and I both saw a slow-moving UFO moving from forward to aft of our ship (which was carrying nuke warfare by the way) we both exclaimed how shocked we were, it was silent and had a V shape dark body and V shaped lights that ran down the bottom sides but not in the back. Close to the lights you could see the lights were surrounded by a silver surface. It seemed once we noticed it, it took a fast deep dive towards us. We both screamed like little girls and ducked our heads and bent over waiting for impact. Nothing happened and the whole experience was quiet. I called the bridge on my radio and asked if they had seen what we did, since we were right below them a few decks. No, nobody had seen a thing. I don't know later if I asked my friends in the radar division if they picked anything up or not, I just can't recall. I know this was not a story that I told for many years because you would be considered nuts. We were not hurt or affected in anyway as far as I know."
What the reader may not know is that the United States had Nuclear Bombs in the South China Sea during The Vietnam War. This came out in the Pentagon Papers released by whistle blower Daniel Ellsberg. Until his leak of classified documents, everyone was oblivious to the possibility of Vietnam going nuclear. This would quite concisely explain the overwhelming amount of excellent and military reports of UFOs from the South China Sea, The Sea of Japan and the nearby Pacific Ocean in both WWII, and The Korean and Vietnam Wars. Legendary Scientist and Ufologist Richard Haines accumulated an astonishing amount of material from these accounts especially from the Korean War which he weaved into a small but concise book exploring some of these Korean War sightings.
One of the unanticipated benefits of MUFON's television program "Hanger One" was that it inspired a plethora of Vietnam Veterans to come forth and file reports with MUFON. Here are additional intriguing reports MUFON has received from our great military veterans who must be identified as highly reliable observers!
MUFON Case # 105227 Sea of Japan, U.S.S. New Orleans Air Craft Carrier
August 24 1972 approx.
Witness states "Me and another person saw a UFO while I was on navy ship off of Sea of Japan. We were on master at arms duty the late watch. My friend, Sgt Meyer, first saw the UFO flying downward toward the ocean chasing another UFO that looked like it was crashing to the ocean floor. The UFO got the craft right before it hit the water It seemed like the craft put some kind of electrical charge to bring the other craft toward the moon. It was a clear night full moon so we could see it take the craft toward the moon. This happened a long time ago. All I know is the guy was with me. Name was Meyers. The ship I was on, I think, was lph10 carrier or lph11 New Orleans or Tripoli. We didn't ask the watchmen.

On duty on the bridge, if they saw anything, it was kept quiet. I didn't know Sgt Meyers very well. They were on way to Australia after leaving our ship. But I remember his name because my name is similar to his "Ayres." I hope this helps you! I really believe in this. I'll never forget what we saw."

What is unusual about this report is that 2 UFO seem to be engaged in a game of cat and mouse where one UFO captures another and retrieves it upwards where the witness perceives it being taken towards the moon. Was it a game? Was it 2 opposing UFO forces? And if so, why in this particular war area?

MUFON Case # 94822 November 1972 approx. date. U.S.S. New Orleans Air Craft Carrier again!

The New Orleans aircraft carrier was designated as the control ship for Operation End Sweep, the mine removal operation near the end of the Vietnam war. The witness, a radar operator, encountered a target as long as an aircraft carrier and twice as wide moving at 50 knots per hour. This is fast for an object in or under the ocean. His supervisor advised to forget it as a weather anomaly but the object took a sudden 90 degree turn after 3 radar sweeps. Target was low to the water perhaps at 50 feet over the surface.

This large undersea object is very similar to the size of other objects seen coming out of and into the waters I the South China Sea in our previous reports.

The witness begins, "Back in 1972 or 73 {November 1972} {is considered the best approximation} at the Gulf of Tonkin Vietnam while I was onboard USS New Orleans LPH 11I (see above report!!!). I was TAD to CIC to help the radar men, I was on surface search radar watch. I saw a target that was larger than an aircraft carrier and maybe twice as wide. It was going quite fast maybe 50 knots, but didn't track it because my supervisor told me it was a weather anomaly. However, I still watched it as it moved straight for about 3 or 4 sweeps. Then on the next sweep it makes a 90-deg. turn straight up for 3 sweeps and then disappears. The target was a week trace (fuzzy) and could have been on the water or above the water by maybe 40 or 50 feet. But my supervisor might be right. It might be the weather. But it was different than any clouds I have seen and the tracking looked deferent, more like a regular target but too fast for a ship and too big for an airplane. to this day I wonder what it really was. My first thought was confusion, then UFO. I had other things to do as I was on watch and it was in a war zone."

Was it a weather anomaly or did it add substantial circumstantial evidence to other reports in the same area at the same time off the coast of Vietnam? The account again occurs in the Gulf of Tonkin and concerns a large target.

This is the same ship, the New Orleans, that a crewman reported a UFO where one UFO chased and captured another. It was also a large object like the June 1973 case. It also took place in the Gulf of Tonkin like February 20th, 1973. Are all of these similarities merely coincidence? And is it yet another example of possible USOs moving at extreme speeds.

MUFON Case # 105834 – January 15th, 1973, date approximate, U.S.S. Mauna Kea

Per the witness: (On the U.S.S Mauna Kea) "Hovering pulsating orb shape color similar to a large beach ball hovering about 30-50' above the water moving at approximately 16 to 18 knots. {I} could see {their} reflection on water. Could see clearly underneath (with) no wake. This sighting was in the South China Sea off the port beam. Our ship was an ammunition ship carrying nuclear weapons. Felt as if we were being probed. It followed for approximately 1 hr. There were other witnesses but I can only remember one other name."

One unusual connection between the Leonard Mason and the Mauna Kea is that both docked together on January 12th, 1972 in the Gulf of Tonkin. The Mauna Kea had been retrofitted to take missiles off other ships onto their own deck in 90 seconds or less in a major upgrade. Did those missile removals include nuclear tipped missiles?

An unusual amount of information was able to be accrued on this January 15th, 1973 case. Here is the investigation and disposition results per Wikipedia:

The U.S.S Mauna Kea was an ammunitions boat designated AE22. It docked at sea with the U.S.S. Oklahoma City to hand over its arsenal of nuke tipped missiles to the Oklahoma on that date (January 15th). Witness was on the Mauna Kea loading nukes with a forklift on deck. Orb approached to within 10 feet of witness. It was car sized. Witness felt chills and felt he was being observed. Another seaman named Bill Sleuter and three others were also witnesses. Witness checked radar room later. No images of object registered. Size of car. Size remained static even though object came in close to ship and should have enlarged. Saw object 10 minutes up close then it disappeared. Total length of sighting over an hour. When first seen it was 30 feet off the sea and about 100 to 500 feet off the stern. Pulsating orb of varying colors including red green and white. Ship was moving at 18 knots and object kept up. Time was between 2 and 4 am. At the time witness was emptying hold number 4 of 5 holds which was the hold with the nukes. They had no escort but may have been trailed by a sub for protection. Per witness, "Bill Sleuter may have been from Plains, Nebraska but I could not find him in legal records on ancestry.com."

The U.S.S. Mauna Kea

Conclusion for this particular case - very suspicious encounter especially concerning nuke tipped missiles which were a secret during the war. There is, of course, the possibility it was a naturally occurring plasma ball like "ball lightning" which was carried along by being magnetically linked to ship hull. However, duration of sighting is too long for ball lightning. Ball lightning is an ion-based plasma that explodes in under a minute as ions seek to revert to their natural state. Objects existing for an hour defy common physics and suggest more aptly, metallic artificial constructs wrapped in a plasma envelope due to plasma advantages when wishing to avoid radar detection as plasma absorbs radar signals and makes an object invisible to radar. Quite the advanced tech needed by someone to surveil American nuke loaded ships in the 1960 and early 1970ss. If not our tech, then whose? Additionally, until the release of the Pentagon Papers by Ellsberg to the New York Times there was no evidence the United States was employing nuclear capabilities in the South China Sea but that report, backed up by this sailor's report, does suggest we had nukes in the Vietnam war theatre and that agents unknown to us and perhaps also unknown to the Chinese and Viet Cong were also surveilling our efforts there.

MUFON Case # 64756 – February 20th, 1973, date approximate. (On the U.S.S. Leonard Mason! AGAIN!)

The witness narrative begins: "Not real sure of exact time. But know it was mid to late winter in the Gulf of Tokin, during the War. We were on Patrol doing Rectangles, in Our Grid, at 2/3's Speed, about 22-23 Knots...about 30 MPH when Sonar reported a contact Bearing off our Starboard side, under water about 200-300 feet. This UFO {USO} circled our Ship (Leonard F. Mason, DD-852) Call sign Stud Poker, 3 and 1/2 Times. And then disappeared at a very high speed. They classified this as a Whale...Really? To the best of my knowledge at this time in History, there were no SUBS that could travel Under Water at that Speed! Let alone Circle at Sumner Class Destroyer doing about 30 MPH. I was a Radioman (RM3) Onboard at this Time, so I only Know what I Heard from Radio Central....It's hard at this time to remember all the Details...I do Believe it was Late JAN. or Early FEB. at Dusk. Hope U can Link this to some other INFO You may already Have....TKS For LISTENING...SPARKY"

NOTE: Additional investigation by MUFON into this incident suggests that dates may be wrong and that the above account may be inexorably connected to the case below. Both ships were in the South China Sea at the same time and part of the same naval group! Also note that The Leonard Mason was involved in the Cuban Encounter a few years earlier. Was there equipment aboard the Leonard Mason that was attracting UFOs?

At this point I would like to introduce another question that ties into our investigation so far. Was the Mason carrying Nukes? We do not know but we have another report from MUFON concerning a U.S. Naval vessel that was during the Vietnam War and it has an odd connection to the Mason! The dirty little secret about atomic weapons in the Vietnam War was that we had plenty in the area! Worse yet is that the idea of using nukes in Viet Nam, according to most available documents, peaked in 1968 and was exposed by Daniel Ellsberg in what have become known as the Pentagon Papers in 1971. Yet our reports show that nukes were still in the war theatre as late as February 1973!

Correlating reports include….

MUFON Case # 64793 June 1973, U.S.S. Okinawa Aircraft Carrier

I investigated this case personally and spoke with the witness at length. Over a three-day period, the witness saw 7 objects shaped like eggs under the water, leaving the water, hovering then taking off and gone from the horizon in under 5 seconds and returning at a 45-degree angle and creating a huge splash as they submerged upon their return.

This witness confirmed every box he marked and all information conveyed on the MUFON CMS form. Witness was sincere. He apparently had some difficulties after returning from Vietnam. His story was credible but I believe his estimates of size were grossly exaggerated unintentionally. He provided many memorable quotes which led me to conclude he was honest and actually saw something.

He stated" I was stationed on a ship Going to Vietnam, {USS Okinawa}, {with the {USS Bristol Bay, USS Okinawa}. 1973 7th Fleet. I was a US Marine machine gunner Going to Vietnam. We left Subic Bay, The Philippines. Could Not See Land. These huge Things Were in The Water Just Under the Ships. When Asked Was Told "You're not supposed to see that." Everyone saw these things go in and out the water. They were Different shapes and light up in {the} center. No one had that technology then or today."

My research has confirmed that this occurred on the USS Okinawa (LPH-3) an aircraft carrier, 2nd battalion, 4th marines traveling with the U.S.S. Bristol County (LST-1198). That was a landing ship assigned to West Pac – Vietnam in July 1973 and concurs closely with the story Mr. Frazier tells.

If you haven't figured it out yet, the USS Oklahoma had contact with both the Leonard Mason and the Mauna Kea in the months prior. Witness continues, "It was beautiful. It was frightening. It was extraterrestrial. If you saw it, it would change your life in a bad way wondering if it was ever coming back. It was scary but then we were all going to Vietnam which was scarier. I had no feelings as to whether it was good or bad."

He concluded the weather was fair at sea that day. This helps determine that observation quality would have been excellent. All in all, apart from his estimate of size, he presented a logical evidence case and a brilliant philosophical one! I concluded he was sincere and something life altering happened to him!

He stated he was a machine gunner on the USS Okinawa 2nd battalion, 4th marines travelling with the seventh fleet specifically the USS Okinawa, the USS Bristol Bay and other ships. This has been historically confirmed via Wikipedia!

The USS Okinawa

He stated" I was watching Hanger 1 and I saw a Vietnam sighting similar to mine and I had to write to MUFON. I saw no entities. It was amazing watching them splash down at a 45-degree angle. We were all told 'you didn't see that' but I think the senior officers didn't know what it was either."

"I entered the service as a PFC and left as a Lance Corporal and gained knowledge of crop circles etc." as a result of this encounter. He "worried he could feel invisible ships around" and told me he was looking out his window as we spoke. Chronic paranoia is not an unexpected result of seeing something extraordinary. Many of our service people suffer from Post-Traumatic Stress Syndrome (PTSS) This witness clearly saw trans-medium vehicles and it affected him for the rest of his life.

The vehicles also exited the ocean eliminating the theory that meteorites were the culprits. Witness stated the objects were 1 and a half to 3 times the size of Gillette Stadium where the NFL Team New England Patriots play. His estimate varied wildly in the conversation. For the purpose of estimating the size of the objects we can use the following scale:

1.) The superdome in New Orleans is 680 ft

2.) Nimitz Class Air Craft Carriers are 1,092 feet

3.) The Empire State Building is 1,250 ft.

The witness continued, "We were not supposed to see these things" he was instructed! He continued" the non-lit portion of the egg was silver to copper metal. The lights were very bright. No windows. No noise. They rose out of the water and hovered about 30 stories (300 ft) over the ocean for 20 seconds then took off and were gone in 5 seconds or less. There were over 200 witnesses. Everyone onboard saw the objects. Feelings of scared and crazy went through seamen's minds."

So, these objects were about the size of Air Craft carriers. They were egg shaped. They had a band of green lights across 1/3 of the body length, a bad of red/pink lights on another and alternating pink/red and green lights on another. The band occupied a full 1/3 of the egg at its equator. The light emitted was "like a phone light" suggesting LEDs. It was not biological. It was a machine according to the witness.
The non-lit portion of the egg was silver to copper metal. The lights were very bright. No windows. No noise. They rose out of the water and hovered about 30 stories (300 ft) over the ocean for 20 seconds then took off and were gone in 5 seconds or less. There were over 200 witnesses. Everyone onboard saw the objects. Feelings of scared and crazy went through seamen's minds according to the witnesses as conveyed by our initial witness.
My disposition for this case was a Technological craft of Unknown Origin as follows "Nothing in nature or in the American military at this time could explain what the witness saw. It is apparent that the witness saw something surreal. The dimensions of the craft he observed varied wildly which makes me suspect they were smaller than football sized stadiums. He cut the diameters in half in the course of conversation. His recollection of the green and red lights was specific and matched his CMS report description suggesting truthfulness."
It is impossible to grasp what he may have seen. It was technological for sure. Its size is suspect. Its ability to hover and take off at incredible speed for its size seems otherworldly. Its ability to enter and exit the ocean in a warzone is intriguing.
Without other witnesses coming forward from his crew, it is hard to judge the accuracy of the story from 50 years ago. However, with the inclusion of MUFON Case # 64756 from across the South China Sea 4 months earlier concerning a large USO circling a ship, this witness's case is significantly bolstered.

An article from the website https://medium.com/@johnmooner-chief/alien-triangle-witnessed-by-the-crew-of-the-uss-racine-in-1976-7687bc41dacd gives us a UFO report from the U.S.S. Racine in 1976. The witness writes"
"October, 28, 1976. 2 days out from San Diego onboard the USS Racine LST 1191 on a "Westpac". I and about 10 other crew members, observed a strange triangle object reported directly behind the ship by the port and starboard lookouts. We were on the midnight rotating watch, 12 to 4 am. I was on the stern of the ship equipped with sound powered headphones to report on any lights or objects, otherwise known as "contacts", to the bridge. While on watch on the stern, I observed that there were no ships, contacts or lights of any kind as expected, as the Racine was sailing alone and not in a convoy. After a while, I heard the port and starboard lookouts talking on the phones. "It looks like a Christmas tree". I then observed a large yellow/orange triangle object directly behind the ship."

It appeared to be hovering just above the water about a mile or less away, while maintaining a fixed distance from the ship. While this was happening, I heard a lot of chattering on the phones and then someone said "Shut-up". After a few minutes, the object appeared to get smaller and smaller as if it sped directly away until it disappeared. When I rotated watch to the bridge on the helm, I saw a radar operator come out of the Combat Information Center. I asked him what was that all about and he said, "There was nothing on radar." There was no longer any talk about what had happened. The next day, I saluted an Officer I knew in passing. I believe this was a really likeable and friendly Officer. I asked him what that was that we all saw while on watch last night. He became angry and said, "You didn't see anything and that's the last I want to hear about it." As far as I can remember, no crew members ever talked about this incident again."

MUFON Case # 127982
April 11 1975 (exact date) approximately 1 am, aboard USS Wichita AOR1 South China Seas bound for Subic Bay, Luzon, Philippines. The witness stated" I had just got off watch in the boiler room and was in my bunk awake, having meditated before turning off my bunk light. My entire body began to buzz and I was unable to move. I was drawn upward through the ship to a position in space near earth. I could see the entire pacific rim from that position. I was next to two beings of light, one was slightly smaller than the other. They were somewhat embryonic in shape and bright white light emitted from their form. I knew them as family and felt a sense of omnipresence. I felt completely safe and loved by them. They showed me the tectonic collapse of the pacific rim. I was horrified and felt the screams and terror of millions of humans. I was then quickly returned to my ship to my bunk and never told anyone until my marriage in 1979, when I told my wife.

So often our military witnesses describe events seen by dozens if not hundreds of other people and often they give names. Why would they all risk their pensions, their livelihoods, their reputations and their sanity to just perpetuate a hoax or a hallucination! There is something to these cases; a thread of a pattern that runs through all of them suggesting it is somehow all interconnected!

And just for good measure, let's go back to WWII to close out these accounts in the Pacific.

MUFON CASE # 15675 March 1943 Alaska

The witness stated "I was aboard the USS Williamson DD-244 (Destroyer) in early 1943 during WWII. The weather was clear with calm seas. The night was very black. At the time of the sighting, we were patrolling the Bearing Sea north of the Alaskan Peninsula, bearing north at about 20 knots."

U.S.S. Williamson DD-244

"I was on watch at the starboard 20mm gun, second deck (galley deck). It was around 2300. My gun turret was above the deck house and there were no obstructions hindering my field of vision, allowing me to have a clear 360-degree view of the sea around the ship. There were four of us together at the starboard gun. "

"The attention of both port and starboard gun crews was drawn to a row of red lights off the port side, traveling parallel to and slightly forward of the bow. I did not see the lights when they first approached so do not know the direction from which they came, or if they came out of the sea. There were at least eight lights in a row, evenly spaced, canted at about 15 degrees to horizontal. I would estimate the lights were no more than 100 yards from the ship. The lights held their relative position to one another throughout the sighting, and appeared to be about 10 feet apart. I would say that the light closest to the water (the lights were canted diagonal to horizontal at approximately 15 degrees) appeared to be about 30 feet above the water."

"I estimate that it would require a cantaloupe held at arm's length to cover a single light. I could not see a structure associated with the lights as there was nothing but blackness between the lights. The lights were a very deep red and did not cast a beam. The lights moved parallel to our ship, holding their position relative to the ship throughout the entire sighting."

"The lights continued to pace the ship as I watched. This continued for at least one hour. I was relieved from watch at 2400. When I went below the lights were still visible. I was too tired to stay on deck and went below to sleep. The next day, the midnight gun crew said that the captain turned the ship and tried to chase the lights. I don't know the outcome of this maneuver. I don't know what the circumstances were when the lights disappeared. But I do know that I have not seen anything like this before or since."

What can we conclude from all these Naval cases described here and the many more from the archives of Barry Greenwood and Dr. Richard Haines whose work on the Korean War incidents merits deep re-evaluation? Ufologist Greenwood documented hundreds of UFO cases from servicemen during the Vietnam War alone!

If I could summarize it all in one sentence it would be the following:

Some entity, some power, some technology we perceive, perhaps, as magic, is quite concerned that we have harnessed and mastered the atom and we are using it to perpetuate not only our own demise but perhaps theirs' also.

UFO The Closest Encounter

The True Story of Calvin Parker

A Review By Chris Evers

Title: UFO The Closest Encounter - The True Story of Calvin Parker

Published by: MOONSTONE BOOKS

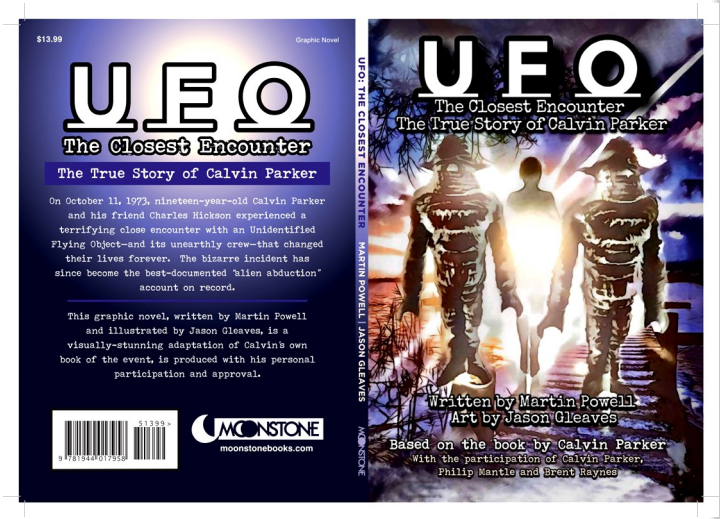
Pages: 128

Printed Colour: Black & White

Words: Martin Powell

Artwork: Jason Gleaves

Available: TBA



UFO The Closest Encounter—The True Story of Calvin Parker, is a different kind of UFO publication. This is a 128 page graphic novel telling the true story of the 11th October 1973 , Pascagoula encounter experienced by both Charles Hickson and Calvin Parker, on the banks of the 'Singing River', in Calvin's own words. Covering the events of the abduction and the following days in pictures.

This excellently produced graphic novel, begins with a review of the history surrounding the Charles Hickson and Calvin Parker abduction event which is provided by Brent Raynes, Brent describes the era tremendously. Events that would prove to have a dramatic affect on Calvin's life.

We are reminded how Calvin would avoid the subject of UFOs in conversations and when at work, if it was discovered who he was, he would simply quit the job, and look for another position elsewhere. Calvin avoided the UFO subject like the plague, which continued for many years after his fateful experience. Calvin would not speak to any family or friends regarding his experience other than his wife Waynette.

Whereas Charles Hickson seemed to somewhat embrace the subject, which eventually culminated in his own book, many years before Calvin released his story, through Flying Disk Press, of that fateful encounter, this being titled: PASCAGOULA-THE CLOSEST ENCOUNTER: MY STORY which is available through Amazon, (Also Calvin's second publication available through Amazon, titled PASCAGOULA-THE STORY CONTINUES - New Evidence & New Witnesses.)

The decision made by Calvin to write and publish his own story, also represented a major change to his personal involvement within the UFO subject. Prior to making his own story public, he had begun to develop an interest in the TV show Ancient Aliens, and while attending a funeral (which he left early after being recognised) he received a telephone call, out of the blue, from the Publisher at Flying Disk Press, Philip Mantle and after a period of discussions Calvin decided to go public after 45 years. The graphic publication which you now have chance to purchase is Calvin's story as previously mentioned and released by Flying Disk Press. The new graphic novel publication is only available from Moonstone...

Calvin worked closely with British researcher and author and incredibly talented artist Jason Gleaves (image right) to recapture the events which occurred that night, as black and white artwork. Several hours were spent on Skype and with the passing of and the sharing of ideas through emails which have resulted in what Calvin has expressed here, in his personal opinion of Jason's work: " I have to say that he has done a remarkable job and his artwork is the most accurate I have ever seen" regarding the Pascagoula case.

Martin Powell, (image above) who penned the story is the author of hundreds of science fiction, mystery, and horror stories. He has worked in the comic book industry since 1986, writing for Marvel, DC, Malibu, Caliber, Moonstone, and Disney, among others, and he has been nominated for the coveted Eisner Award.

Martin also writes children's books, and frequently contributes prose for many short story anthologies. He lives in Alabama, USA. With those successes under his belt, as you would expect Martin has captured the story expertly.

This publication gives far more information about Calvin and his personal experiences, his meeting with J. Allan Hynek, Dr. Harder, Budd Hopkins and more. But more importantly it expands immensely on the events which occurred on that night. A night that changed Calvin's life forever. It provides a before and after, not just of that night in Pascagoula in 1973 but a glimpse into other related events. Some of which may not be known by the average researcher of the UFO subject.

But more importantly it gives those who may not have read Calvin's two fantastic books from Flying Disk Press a chance to read, and see the real story and images of the "ugly ones" which have been officially approved by Calvin himself. With introductions provided by Philip Mantle, and Calvin Parker, this graphic novel is the ultimate, landmark, in the telling of Calvin Parker's personal experience of those events nearly 50 years ago.

BOOK REVIEW

By Malcolm Robinson OLM Associate Editor

TITLE: Dream Telepathy. (The landmark ESP experiments)
Author: Montague Ullman, Stanley Krippner, Alan Vaughan.
PUBLISHER: Afterworld Press.

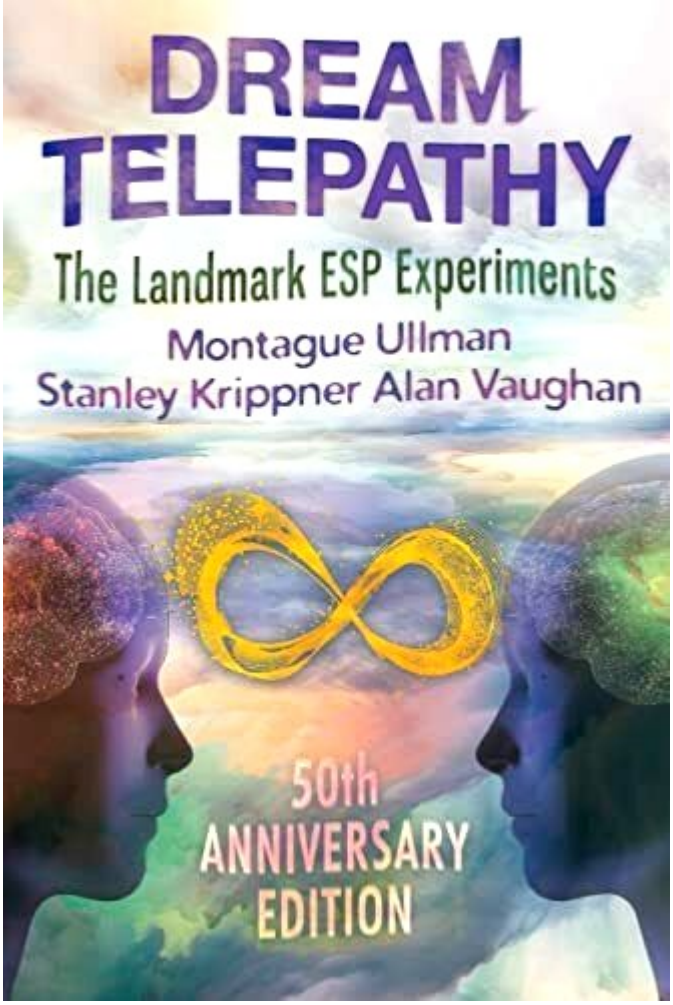
PRICE: Check with publisher.
ISBN: 978-1-78677-234-3



There are countless books out there which deal with dreams, most of which try to analyze those dreams and try and find some purpose to them. What could they mean? Do they foretell the future? Or are they nothing but the confabulation of images drawn from your subconscious which includes that day's events, which are somehow all put together by your own mind's producer and director into a crazy off the wall motion picture? There is no denying that dream books are big business, probably more in the United States than anywhere else. People have been fascinated by dreams, from the ancient Pharaohs to present day man. Some people say that they don't dream, or that they can't recall their dreams, that's as maybe, but we have to ask ourselves, 'WHY'. Why do we dream? What is the purpose of dreams? Well, these questions have been asked by mankind for countless centuries. But there is one category of dreams which takes those dreams to another level, and that is, 'prophetic dreaming'!

Many people have had dreams in which certain events have come true. Some would say that this is but chance, but often times it is way more than that. This book looks at scientific study of dreams, and provides the reader with experiments that will simply blow you away. Now this wasn't just a one week study of telepathic dreams, this was a ten year study bringing together many different people to conduct experiments in controlled conditions, all of which raised more than an eyebrow with their spot on predictions. Two men were at the sharp end of these experiments, psychiatrist Montague Ullman and psychologist Stanley Krippner. What I found most interesting from this book, was that a chap called James Spottiswoode looked into the dream journals kept by one Alan Vaughan and was surprised to learn that Alan's telepathic dream 'hits', occurred on the nights when there were less geomagnetic activity than on nights when there were more geomagnetic activity. Could these prophetic precognitive dreams be due to certain atmospheric conditions?

Many test subjects were subjected to electrodes fastened to their scalps at the Maimonides Medical Centre in Brooklyn New York, and, under controlled conditions, a sender in a different part of the building would look at a picture and try and send that visual image of the picture through to the subject with the attached electrodes. This was done in an effort to see if that image would somehow surface in his dream state. When the sleeper was awakened, it was learnt that some of the dream did indeed resemble the 'sent' picture. Further experiments of this nature stated that this was significantly greater than chance alone.
The book also looks at other famous dream seers, one of which was Edgar Cayce, (The Sleeping Prophet) The book is peppered with prophetic dreams all of which go to show that some future events are occurring in people's dream world? How can this be? How is it possible for the future to be determined in this way? Is life pre-ordained? Is there no free will at all? And if there is no free will, what is the point of life when there already is an ending set out for us?

Of course, the ancient Egyptians, the Romans, and the Greeks, all put stock on foretelling the future in dreams, but it is only now, through the work of men like Ullman, Krippner and Vaughan, that real research shows that, "Hey, there is something in this"! Of course, prior to the study of dreams by these men, other scientific minds were looking at prophetic dreams, namely Carl Jung and Sigmond Freud. A study was also undertaken in the 19th century by Edmund Gurney, F.W.H. Myres, and Frank Podmore in which, in part, detailed prophetic dreams. These ended up in a study entitled, 'Phantasms of the Living.'. What I found equaling important in this book, was that the authors referred back to previous studies on work to do with prophetic dreaming, so the reader is left in understanding that this subject, is a far bigger subject than they could ever have imagined. The book is heavy in part, by that I mean I struggled through some of the text relating to experiments and the like, but that said, what is cemented into this book, is pure facts and figures from present day and the past. The authors have carefully sourced some astonishing facts and relay those facts to the reader so that they too can fully understand the strange world that is prophetic dreaming. Whilst the book speculated as to the possible 'mechanism' behind telepathic dreams, we are no further forward in truly understanding them. That they occur, is not in dispute. Will we ever truly know 'why' we see the future in dreams?

If you are into telepathic and prophetic dreams, then this is the book for you. Well worth the read.

Have you ever fancied owning your own science fiction figurine or perhaps a famous UFO… then look no further, you could have your very own three-dimensional collectors piece, whether it be a favourite Sci-Fi character such as 'Gort' from the Day The Earth Stood Still' or the famous U.S.S. Enterprise from Star Trek. Perhaps the famous Martian invasion craft from the 'War of the Worlds', or your own UFO craft from a famous case, such as Rendlesham, Gulf Breeze, Pascagoula or others, what ever you want the skies the limit, you could add it to your own collection and build it in to a personal, special series of dioramas.

I've been so lucky to have made models and diorama's for people from all around the world, plus fellow Ufologists like Philip Mantle and Malcolm Robinson and even had some of my pieces displayed in museums.

Some of the work I have completed has given me great joy and pleasure as I've worked closely with UFO witnesses and abductees in recreating what they have experienced and seen.

One such recent case I worked closely with was Calvin Parker and together we recreated his abduction onto an Elliptical shaped craft with Charles Hickson during their joint 1973, Pascagoula, Mississippi experience. The female Extra-terrestrial onboard, who Calvin had his own close encounter with, has never been recreated or seen, by anyone before. Upon completion of the diorama Calvin's reaction too the piece, he actually said "it sent shivers down his spine".

Another great piece I've reproduced was the scene taken from the famous 'Alien Autopsy' video were I worked closely with a graphic designer to produce the most accurate depiction of the Alien lying on the hospital trolley.

See the example images on the left hand page.

So, as you can see most things are possible to 3D print using up-to-date modern 3D resin and filament printers,

Upon placing your order I will discuss with you what your own specifications are and requirements plus your painting-finishing needs.

ALIEN AUTOPSY

The Greatest HOAX of ALL Time

By Spyros Melaris

This is a complete account of how this monumental film came to be. It is the story of how Spyros Melaris found himself in a very unique position, and as a magician and a filmmaker, he saw an opportunity to ask two massive questions of the world.

"Do Aliens exist, and are they visiting our planet?"

He set himself a challenge to create the biggest illusion perpetrated on the world by a magician and filmmaker. In 1995 the internet was still young and although email groups existed on platforms such as Yahoo, very few people were using them, unlike today when the Internet would play a colossal role in spreading the word.

This is a complicated story and most parts are so amazing that the reader will soon see that film was devised through different expertise's all found in a very small crew indeed. Like all good magic effects, this was seemingly impossible.

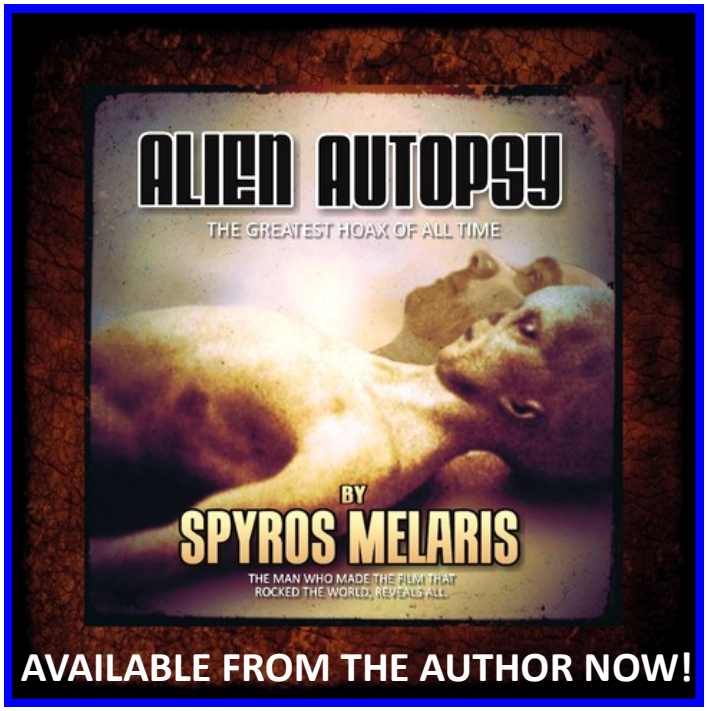
With a very modest budget, Spyros and his crew created a monumental piece of UFO history. Indeed, the story was so compelling it spilled over into mainstream pop culture and it never left.

The film was featured in newspapers and magazines all over the globe. It featured in mainstream television shows such as The Simpsons, Seinfeld, and The X-Files to name but a few. A reported 2 billion people have seen the images of this alien and after its 25th anniversary, it is as much a topic of discussion as it ever was.

The story starts in the South of France and soon became viral at a time when that wasn't even a 'thing'. It was the first major example of 'Fake News' and to this day, the question is still being asked, "Do aliens exist, and are they visiting our planet?"

In this book, Spyros Melaris tells all, Warts 'N' All'. He describes the situations, the meetings, and the challenges. He tells about the people involved and what made this hoax possible. He explains in fine detail who did what, and how they pulled off the greatest hoax of all time.

This is a no-holds-barred account of what really happened. You will see detailed plans, drawings, and rare or private photos. Melaris fills in all the blanks as never before. The book is accompanied by a dedicated website that backs up the various statements and stories with video, film, and telephone recordings. New items will be added to this resource as the story progresses. All book owners will receive the details of how to access this special website. If you are a UFO/



Alien fan, you will love this book.
If you are a psychologist and interested in the human mind, you will enjoy this book.
If you are a film or art student, you will learn from this book.
In fact, no matter what your stance or beliefs, no matter if you are an expert in the subject of Ufology or just a spectator looking for an entertaining and educational account of one of the world's greatest true stories, this is a must-have book.

No one knows more about The Alien Autopsy than Spyros Melaris. Only one man who was involved with this film had a hand in every aspect of its creation.

The origin of the Grey E.T. is commonly associated with the Betty and Barney Hill abduction claim which took place in 1961, although sceptics see some precursors in science fiction and earlier paranormal claims. The Grey aliens are also famously known from the Roswell UFO incident from 1947.

"Alien Greys", aka: "Greys", "Grays", "Roswell Greys", and "Zeta Reticulans", are alleged extra-terrestrial beings whose existence is promoted in ufological, paranormal, and New Age communities, and who are named for their skin colour. Around half of all reported alien encounters in the United States describe Grey aliens. Such claims vary in every respect including their nature (ETs, extradimensionals, demons, or machines), origins, moral dispositions, intentions, and physical appearances (even varying in their eponymous skin colour). A composite description derived from overlap in claims, would have Greys as small-bodied sexless beings with smooth grey-coloured skin, enlarged head and large black eyes.
